Officers All Trained In Speed Enforcement

By Carol Bannerman

Drivers in Takoma Park would do well to heed the speed limits with special care since the entire police force is now trained to use LIDAR, a radar-like speed detection device. Currently traffic stops average 300 per month, and many are prompted by LIDAR - an acronym for Light Detection and Ranging. The system uses reflected pulsed laser light to detect the speed of vehicles.

The TPPD's four newest officers took to the road last month to complete training with instructor Sgt. Dan Frishkorn, setting up shop at New Hampshire and Larch Avenues to test what they learned in a morning class. Targeting vehicles with the LIDAR device, the officers encountered plenty of excessive speed, and wrote 100 warnings in less than three hours - even using a tolerance of 10 miles over the posted limit.

LIDAR is one of two common handheld speed measurement devices. The older Radar system, adopted by police after World War II in the 1950s, uses very high frequency radio waves or microwaves, reflected off a vehicle, to measure the object's speed. LIDAR uses reflected laser light signals. Because of its narrow field of view, LIDAR can pinpoint specific vehicles in congested traffic at a distance, and is more user-friendly and accurate. It can be used at 900 to 1,200 feet, before an officer can identify who might be driving the vehicle.

"By targeting the vehicle specifically at 1,000 feet, the LIDAR can measure the speed with almost 100 percent accuracy," explained Frishkorn, one of two in-agency instructors.

The day-long training includes classroom instruction on the association between speed and collisions, death and injuries, on laws and court rulings affecting LIDAR use, and on the preparation and presentation of courtroom testimony related to speed measurement.

In addition to influencing road safety by encouraging compliance with speed limits, LIDAR traffic enforcement can contribute to public safety by establishing a visible police presence and identifying motorists who may have warrants or are in violation of other laws, such as license suspension.

The Maryland legislature has approved the use of automated speed enforcement (using cameras) in limited areas of Montgomery County such as residential and school zones. The Takoma Park Police hope to initiate such mechanisms and are participating with other agencies to implement the law.

Residents can suggest areas for traffic enforcement by contacting the Community Oriented Policing unit, supervised by Sgt. Kurt Gilbert at 301-891-7124 or the Operations Commander, Lt. Richard Ofc. David Quante takes aim at vehicles driving south on New Hampshire Avenue, to detect their speed and pull them over for pushing beyond the speed limit.

Cipperly, at 301-891-7117. An evaluation can be made of the need, suitability, and safety for enforcement, with or without LIDAR, in a particular area. •

Greening the City, One Person at a Time

By Virginia Myers Kelly

The environment is big news this summer.

Flooding has taken out bridges and bike paths in Sligo Creek. Mercury is soaring. "Code red" days, when air quality is so bad people are warned to stay inside, are commonplace.

And this summer a documentary film about global warming joined X-Men, The Last Stand as one of the top ten most popular movies.

Joseph Horgan, a member of Friends of Sligo Creek, relaxes on a green roof that both gives Takoma Park homeowner Nina Garfield expanded outdoor space to enjoy and provides a place for stormwater runoff.

The film, An Inconvenient Truth, presents its own last stand - a last chance to address what the film's star, Al Gore, calls a moral imperative to reverse global warming. Carbon dioxide, much of it from fossil fuels, is trapping heat in the atmosphere, causing dramatic climate change. The global ice caps are melting, warm-climate diseases like malaria moving to higher altitudes, violent hurricanes are more common, droughts and wildfires pandemic.

So what do we do? Last month we looked at the City's environmental policies: bio-diesel and hybrid service vehicles, recycling, the tree ordinance, and green building policies. This issue we examine what residents are doing: Thinking globally, acting locally.

Home is where the impact is

One of Takoma Park's best known environmental crusaders is Mike Tidwell, whose home has become a showcase for affordable, clean-energy living. Tidwell, who founded the Chesapeake Climate Action Network (chesapeakeclimate.org), has conducted 34 tours of his home since he converted it to green energy in 2001.

Tidwell and his family are so committed to reducing energy consumption that their electric meter runs backward. Much of this is due to photovoltaic (solar) panels on the roof, which produce 70 percent of the household's energy. There's also a solar hot water system and a corn stove for winter heat. Even before installing renewable energy systems, the family reduced energy consumption by 52 percent with a high-efficiency refrigerator, compact fluorescent light bulbs, drying clothes on a line, and switching off lights in unoccupied rooms. Tidwell converted his home to green energy for about $7,500, and with the energy savings his costs come out to $30 per month.

Anxious to spread the word, Tidwell hands out practical follow-up contacts

Folk Fest Adds Hip-Hop

By Kevin Adler

Chairman, Takoma Park Folk Festival

What is folk music? It's a question the Takoma Park Folk Festival producers have wrestled with for years.

The Festival is designed with numerous goals in mind. We want to create an exciting program, with top-quality performances for people of all ages. We want performances to represent many folk traditions from around the world through music, dance, and storytelling. We want to bring back some of our most popular performers, the friends and neighbors who are part of the fabric of Takoma Park. We also want the Festival to be organic, to evolve, and to offer the unusual or unexpected.

Which brings us to hip-hop. This year, for the first time, we will have two hip-hop performers at our one-day extravaganza on Sunday, September 10, at Takoma Park Middle School. Storm the Unpredictable, an award-winning performer and songwriter who lives in Oxon Hill, will be at our 7th Heaven Stage, and the youth hip-hop dance ensemble Future Shock will be at the Grassy Nook.

"Hip-hop is an emerging form of folk music," says Derek Hill, a member of the Program Committee. "It's spoken-word poetry, set to music that's live or recorded, or a combination of both. Plus it's listened to by people of all ages and races, and its influence is everywhere. We're hearing it reaching into other music, including that of musicians people would consider to be 'folk singers.'"

The desire of many hip-hop artists to address political issues also reflects an important folk music tradition, Hill adds. "Folk artists who came out of the 1960s protest music tradition want to sing about social issues. Storm the Magnificent does the same thing," Hill says.

"One of the great things about the Festival is that we can incorporate something new—even as we celebrate the music and musicians who we know and love," says Pam Larson, co-chair of the Program Committee. "We introduced a Singer-Songwriter Showcase three years ago so that we could provide an outlet for folk singers who had not been part of the Festival in the past. Now, bringing in Storm and Future Shock is another example of our embrace. Plus, I've seen Future Shock, and they're great. Lots of energy, and the kids will have a great time."

This year's Festival certainly embraces many musical traditions. Seven stages will showcase more than 50 music, dance, and storytelling performances, including Irish and Celtic songs, West African drumming, traditional and modern South American music, bluegrass, Cajun, lots of singer-songwriters, and a tribute to Crosby Stills Nash and Young. "We really try to embrace and reflect the ethnic diversity of the area, while showcasing the talented performers," says Diana Friedman-Chiu, who is in charge of programming the Festival's World Stage. "I grew up here, in Silver Spring, and one thing that stands out is the international flavor."

The World Stage, as its name implies, is especially broad-ranging. This year the stage will include: Irish-Celtic sounds of Shen Fine (an abbreviation of "Shenandoah's Finest"); Alicia

Deeny's Latin American-influenced pop stylings; Eastern European Jewish music from Klezmos; the Ziva Spanish Dance Ensemble; Chiek Hamala Diabate's music from Mali; Peruvian flute musicians Yawari; and Russian music from the Samovar Folk Ensemble. "On just this one stage, we will have performers from four continents," said Friedman-Chiu. "Because the dancers and some performers come in native costumes, it's also a very colorful sight."

The children's stage, known as the Grassy Nook, is almost as diverse. Performances include Future Shock's hip-hop, Korean dance, Welsh storytelling, American storytelling, Uncle Pete's comic antics, and Frank "Banjo Man" Cassel's American classics for kids.

Other stages each have their themes, too: World (folk music "gone big"); Abbott (traditional folk music); Grove and 7th Heaven (contemporary singer-songwriters); and Lenore Robinson Dance Stage (dance instruction).

For folks who tire of the music (as if that's possible), there are many other entertainment and educational options all day. The juried Crafts Show and Sale will have 49 artisans with hand-crafted pottery, candles, textiles, woodworking, jewelry, and more. At least 100 Community Tables will represent local churches and schools, sports leagues, political candidates, environmental causes, and more. Two activities areas for kids will include games and face-painting with Cub Scout Pack 33, and hands-on art with Abakadoodle, which provides

Reel Fun with Your Home Movies

The Takoma Park Film Festival wants to see your home movies — really! In its first celebration of Home Movie Day, an annual, worldwide event featuring old Super 8, Regular 8 or 16mm home movies, the group is urging local families to share their footage. The affair will also feature experts on film preservation and speakers from local preservation societies.

Anyone may bring their Super 8, Regular 8 or 16mm home movies to the event, where film fest organizers will inspect films for damage and add leader, if necessary, before projecting them. (Participants will also be asked to sign a waiver releasing us from any damage due to a film's poor condition.) Participants can choose to introduce their films or speak over them as they are being projected. Representatives from local historical societies will speak to the cultural and historic importance of small gauge film, and organizers are hoping to have experts on film preservation on hand to make recommendations on handling and storage.

"There's no such thing as a bad home movie," says famed director John Waters. "These mini-underground opuses are revealing, scary, joyous, always flawed, filled with accidental art and shout out from attics and closets all over the world to be seen again. Home Movie Day is an orgy of self-discovery, a chance for family memories to suddenly become show business. If you've got one, whip it out and show it now."

Takoma Park's Home Movie Day will take place at the Community Center from 2 to 5 p.m. on August 12. It is free and open to all. For more information, see www.takomaparkfilmfestival.org/news.html or www.homemovieday.org.

COLTA'S CORNER

By Jean Kerr
Housing Specialist

The Commission on Landlord Tenant Affairs (COLTA) recently approved two capital improvement petitions for rental properties in Takoma Park. They appear in order of their petition numbers:

Capital Improvement Petitions 115 Lee Avenue (2006-29L)

On July 5, 2006, a capital improvement petition was approved for a rent increase of $72.97 for one unit at the property. The improvements included electrical wiring, installation of new fixtures, lights, break box, plaster, and painting.

8208 Houston Court (2006-36H)

On June 25, 2006, a hardship rent increase petition was not granted because the landlord failed to show after adjusting for inflation, that the Net Operating Income (NOI) in the previous base year (1990) is larger than the Net Operating Income (NOI) in the petition year. The landlord has filed a request for a COLTA hearing which is scheduled for August 15, 2006.

All increases are in addition to the annual Rent Stabilization Allowance in effect at the time the increases are taken.

Housing Mailbox

By Moses A. Wilds, Jr.
Landlord-Tenant Coordinator

A Tenant contacted the Mailbox regarding whether her Landlord was responsible for damage to her personal property after a tree was uprooted during a recent storm and fell onto the apartment building.

In most instances the Landlord's property insurance would likely cover the repair of the apartment building, but would not cover the damage to the tenant's personal property. Tenants are therefore strongly encouraged to secure rental insurance to protect their personal property against fire, water damage, lightning, hail, windstorm, vandalism and personal liability losses should a visitor injure him/herself while a guest in the tenant's rental unit.

When considering purchasing a rental insurance policy tenants should carefully consider the following policy considerations:

- What is the policy deductible - the amount the tenant is responsible for paying for each claim? Some insurance policies have deductibles of $250-$500 for each claim or the tenant may decide to lower the deductible which will probably increase the cost of the policy.

- Does the policy contain special limits for particular items? Some policies for instance have a monetary limit for furs, jewelry, and artwork. If this limit does not meet your needs, consider obtaining a policy addendum which will provide for extended coverage for these items.

- Always confirm what the policy does not cover. Examples of losses that may not be covered include damage caused by domestic animals, birds or insects, water damage caused by flood and damage caused by earthquakes.

- Does the policy allow for replacement value of property lost or does it allow for the depreciated value of the property? This is a very important question for tenant consideration in selecting an insurance policy.

- Does the policy provide for reasonable living expenses if the tenant is unable to live in his/her rental unit due to a loss covered by insurance?

- Does the policy provide for purchaser discounts if the rental unit has such security devices as smoke detectors, fire extinguishers, and dead bolt locks?

Tenants should contact several insurance companies and request information about the policies they offer to renters. Tenants should carefully choose the policy that best suits their needs and remember to keep rental units safe and secure while there or away.

Tenants or Landlords who have questions about the city's Landlord-Tenant Law should call 301-891-7215 or contact me at MosesW@takomagov.org.

Adopt A Tree on "Main Street"

Even with record rainfall, the hot summer months can be awfully stressful for our publicly-owned trees. The Main Street Takoma Design Committee seeks to address this situation with the 2006 Adopt A Tree Program.

Through Adopt A Tree, businesses and residents along the Maryland portion of Main Street Takoma take care of publicly-owned trees between Takoma Junction and the state line, watering and picking up litter daily, until the end of October. For a $20 contribution, they get a logo watering bucket and a customized marker with the adopter's name. Additional trees may be adopted for an additional $10 each. Eleven trees have already been adopted, so participants are encouraged to step up now!

It is hoped that regular, daily watering will help the trees make it through the summer months without succumbing to the heat stress and disease which annually take their toll.

Interested participants may learn more by contacting the Main Street Takoma Design Committee, designcommittee@mainstreettakoma.org. The 2006 Adopt A Tree Program is a project of the Old Takoma Business Association and its Main Street Takoma initiative for downtown revitalization and improvement.

New Funding for Main Street Takoma

Main Street Takoma has an additional $75,000 for facade improvement thanks to a matching fund program run by the state Department of Housing and Community Development. Funds will be distributed over a two-year period to pay for pre-approved improvements to the exteriors of existing commercial properties in the Maryland portion of Main Street Takoma, which stretches from Takoma Junction, down Carroll and Laurel Avenues, to the state line.

The Facade Improvement Program is administered by the Design

Committee of Main Street Takoma. A fund of $15,000 was established for the FY2006-2007 cycle, and is already in use for projects in the downtown business district. The new funding, for FY 2007-2008, will offset up to 50 percent of the costs for an additional $150,000 of commercial restoration, renovation, and improvement.

Commercial tenants and property owners interested in learning more about matching funds for building improvements are urged to contact the Main Street Takoma Design Committee, designcommittee@mainstreettakoma.org.

The Master Plan: Establishing a Vision

This article is part of an ongoing series by Housing and Community Development to explore the community vision for The City of Takoma Park — stable residential neighborhoods with linkages to public facilities and revitalized commercial centers — and the development framework that will achieve this vision. This series will explore the Takoma Park Master Plan 2000, and recommendations regarding commercial centers, neighborhoods, community-serving facilities, parks and environmental features, and circulation systems. The Master Plan is the comprehensive plan for the City of Takoma Park and was developed with community members through advisory groups, community workshops, forums, and public hearings. More detailed information is available online at www.mc-mncppc.org. Printed copies are available from the Maryland — National Capital Park and Planning Commission, 8787 Georgia Avenue, Silver Spring, Maryland. The Montgomery County Zoning Ordinance may be consulted on the "libraries" page of www.amlegal.com.

Commercial Revitalization — What's the Vision?

What does the near future look like in Takoma Park? The city's master plan, developed by community members, sees it this way: a city of safe, attractive, community-serving, and convenient commercial centers, with places for people to gather, walk, talk, and ride bicycles, not just shop. It recommends sidewalks with improved streetscapes (wider walking places, trees and landscaping, and higher quality materials), and revitalization coordinated with Prince George's County and the District of Columbia.

One main component is the Takoma Park/East Silver Spring Commercial Revitalization Overlay Zone (CROZ), a new zone for all commercial property in Takoma Park with the exception of Maple Avenue. It is intended to create attractive retail and residential buildings, comfortable streetscapes, and places to which people want to walk and bike. The CROZ allows the Planning Board to reduce parking as many people walk, bike and take transit to shop and socialize in Takoma Park, unlike more suburban areas of Montgomery County. In line with Smart Growth, the zone allows apartments, townhouses, and condominiums above and below commercial units, such as exist in Old Takoma.

The strongest part of CROZ is a shift from "guidance" to "requirement," meant to ensure new development is consistent with community vision and recommendations. The zone also reduces the size of new development required to go through site plan review to 1,000 square feet. The Planning Board may only approve site plans that are in conformance with the CROZ. The County will not issue permits to new development over 1,000 square feet in size if the Planning Board does not approve them.

Old Takoma — Vision for Main Street

The vision for Old Takoma, including Old Town and Takoma Junction, is of "a village center with traditional small town charm, providing unique stores and services to both nearby neighborhoods and regional visitors." Each new development presents an opportunity to achieve this vision. The Master Plan recognizes the adjacent commercial area of Takoma, D.C. and the Metro Station, the appealing character, walkability, and variety of businesses. Recommendations include stores with main doors that open onto the sidewalk and big glass storefronts, and maintenance of the low-scale, small town, historic character of buildings. One recommendation, for streetscape improvements — especially between Old Town and Takoma Junction and between Old Town and Takoma Metro — has already been initiated by the City with funding from the state and county. Phase I of the project, with a public art connection; wider, buffered, well lit sidewalks; and shade trees, is already in place.

Finally, it recommends coordination among the various jurisdictions for improvements between Takoma Old Town and the area around the Takoma Metro station in D.C. The City is also working with Main Street Takoma to address possible parking solutions.

The Takoma Junction vision is an extension of Old Town, including successful, unique stores and services for adjacent neighborhoods and regional customers. The strengths include public spaces, neighborhoods you can walk to, and street-oriented retail.

Recommendations include maintaining low scale, small town, historic character, the Carroll Avenue Streetscape project and other streetscaping, that the new fire station be sensitive to the historic character of the area, and that MNCPPC conduct a study to coordinate improvements in the area including the redevelopment of the public lot, traffic calming, pedestrian and bicycle access, and circulation issues.

Key Recommendations for Old Takoma Include:

- Street-Oriented Retail
- Streetscape improvements for pedestrian and bicycle access
- New development needs to be sensitive to the scale and character of the area
- Address traffic calming, circulation, and adequacy of parking
- Coordinate with the District of Columbia for streetscapes and new development, especially around the metro
- Maintain low-scale, small-town, historic character of the area

Picture Books for Older Readers

By Karen MacPherson

Picture books aren't just for the youngest readers anymore. Instead, authors and illustrators are increasingly using the picture books' spacious, visually-focused format to create books designed to attract school-age readers in a new way.

These picture books often are wonderfully rich in text and illustration. But there is a catch: many tackle challenging themes not always appropriate for younger readers. Yet these ARE picture books, and don't necessarily belong on the shelves with novels or non-fiction.

This can be a conundrum for librarians (and booksellers), and makes it ever more important for parents and other adults to preview the books they choose for their children. And, parents of older children may want to consider picture books for kindling the interest of a reluctant reader, or adding to the literary life of one already hooked on books.

Here are some top-notch picture books for older readers:

- Fireboat, written and illustrated by Maira Kalman, tells the compelling story of an aging fireboat named the John J. Harvey saved from the scrap heap by a group of preservationists. Their dedication pays off on Sept. 11, 2001, when the Harvey plays a key role in helping battle the flames engulfing the World Trade Towers.

- With its spare text and cartoonish illustrations, Jellybeans seems a perfect book for fidgety preschoolers. But the book, written and illustrated by Sylvia van Ommen, details a discussion about death — what it means, what it feels like, etc. — between two friends. While fairly light-hearted, it raises some difficult (and fascinating) issues that might be too intense for preschoolers.

- Author Rosemary Wells teams with artist Petra Mathers to bring a legend to life in The Miraculous Tale of the Two Maries. Beautifully written and illustrated, this book tells of two friends who are just 16 when they are killed in a fierce ocean storm. But the two strike a deal with God, who allows them to live in a netherworld where they can do good deeds for their families and friends.

- Golem, written and illustrated by the late David Wisniewski, is a disturbing, thought-provoking combination of art and text. In it, Wisniewski retells the story of a rabbi who shapes a terrifying man of clay — a "golem" — to ensure the safety of the Jews of Prague. But the plan doesn't work out as the rabbi had hoped, and even as the golem begs for his life, the rabbi is forced to destroy him.

- Author/illustrator Patricia Polacco digs into her family history to tell of a remarkable Civil War friendship in Pink and Say. Pink was an African-American, serving with the Union forces, who helps save the life of a white Union soldier named Say. But their friendship is brief and they are brutally separated when they are discovered by Confederate soldiers. It's a gut-wrenching, powerfully-told story that has a lot to say about racism and war.

- Zen Shorts, which won a Caldecott Honor this year, may be my favorite picture book for older readers. Here, Jon Muth, who both wrote and illustrated the book, relates three Zen tales narrated by Stillwater, a panda. Illustrations are delightful, but it is the stories that make this book so powerful, as Stillwater offers gentle lessons in persistence, patience, generosity, and letting go.

Reynard to Remain on Staff

By Jillian Hershberger

Children's and Youth Services Coordinator

Reynard the Library Fox, who has been the Children's Room helper for many years, has elected to stay on as Karen MacPherson's assistant. I shall miss him sorely, but I agree that this is a good decision. I am confident that Karen and Reynard will make a dynamite team, and I can leave the Library with a lighter heart.

On another note, I would like to point out once again that the Library does own the book How the Heather Looks by Joan Bodger. Subtitled A Joyous Journey to the British Sources of Children's Books, it had been out of print and almost impossible to find through second-hand sources for many years since its first appearance by Viking in NY in 1965, earning it the accolade of being the book most likely to be stolen by children's librarians when they retire. Fortunately, I have had my own legitimately acquired copy since the late '60s. When the handsome new reprint came out in 1999, I hastily bought it for our collection. The book is a lovely read for arm-chair travelers and lovers of children's literature.

End of Summer Quest

Attention, Summer Quest participants! Gather with us on Monday, September 11 at 7:30 p.m. to mark the official end of the Summer Quest program with a party. We want to celebrate your summer reading achievements in the latest Summer Quest adventure created by artist/storyteller extraordinaire Dave Burbank. In keeping with Summer Quest's recycling theme, we will recycle- via a raffle — the oversized bear who used to live in the Children's Room. All readers who have completed the Summer Quest program will be eligible for the raffle, and we will choose one lucky winner to take home the bear. But everyone will get to do crafts and games at the party, as we share some of our favorite books of the summer. Please let us know if you are coming, and see you there!

Support the Library and the Morrissey Tournament!

The fifth annual Mike Morrissey Mulligan Madness Charity Golf Tourney will be held on Monday, October 16, at the Redgate Golf Course in Rockville, starting at 9 a.m.

All proceeds from the Morrissey tournaments directly benefit the Takoma Park Maryland Library. More than $15,000 has been raised over the past four years.

Contributions have funded programs such as Lupe Marks' Spanish story hour for preschoolers and their care givers, and have helped equip the new computer rooms in the Learning Center. (That 'thank-you' message that scrolls across the public Internet computers there and in the Library acknowledges the Friends of Mike Morrissey as well as the Takoma Foundation and the Friends of the Library.)

As many people know, Mike Morrissey was a Takoma Park resident and a lover of books and libraries. After his death several years ago, relatives and friends from all over the metro area and states as far away as Texas began gathering in this once-a-year celebration of his life and abiding interests. The annual golf tournament is followed by a party and charity auction.

Last year event organizers visited the Takoma Park Library, many for the first time, and presented Library Director Ellen Robbins and staff with a check for $5,000 from the 2005 tournament.

This year Library staffers Gene Miller and Dave Burbank are playing in the tournament. They are looking for sponsors! So whether you play golf or not, this is a golden opportunity to support the Library. Singles play for $75 each, foursomes for $300. Details and entry forms are available at the Library, or call Ellen Robbins at 301-891-7258 for more information.

A Few Fire Safety Tips

- Gasoline-powered engines. Lawn mowers, motor bikes, chainsaws, and lawn and garden tractors are useful machines that require the safe handling of gasoline. A single spark can ignite gasoline vapors, causing fire and explosion. Allow gasoline powered engines to cool completely before refueling them. After filling the tank, close the gasoline container before starting the engine. Soak up spills using clay cat-box litter. When refilling a portable gasoline container, set it on the ground first. Never fill gasoline containers while they're in a car trunk or on a truck bed. Make sure that portable gasoline containers are never completely full. Gasoline vapors expand under ordinary climate conditions and could build up dangerous pressure levels in a too-full container. Leave some room for expansion and be sure the container is capped tight. Transport gasoline in your trunk with the trunk lid ajar. Never carry containers of gasoline in your car's passenger compartment. Never smoke around gasoline or other flammable liquids.

- Barbecuing. Use barbecue grills only outdoors. Indoors, they are serious fire hazards, and they produce toxic gases that can be lethal in enclosed spaces.

MSFA Hall of Fame Inductee

At the June 2006 Maryland State Firemen's Association convention, Takoma Park VFD member Carlos Alfaro was inducted into the Hall of Fame. This is a prestigious honor, only 10 people throughout the Maryland Fire Service are inducted each year. This year more than 50 were nominated. Congratulations to Carlos!

Outdoors, keep barbecue grills away from your home, kids playing, and from combustibles, such as shrubs, brush, and piles of leaves. Watch fires and hot charcoal grills at all times. People have been burned severely using gasoline to start or feed charcoal fires. Use only proper liquid charcoal lighter or another charcoal-starting device, and never add any combustible liquid to a lit charcoal fire. If your fire begins to die, add dry kindling and fan the fire to revive it. When you are finished cooking, wait until the coals are cool before leaving the grill. If you are in a hurry, carefully douse the coals with water, avoiding splashes and splatters (from the full force of a garden hose, for example) and keeping your body clear of all steam and smoke. If you use a grill fueled by LP-gas, periodically check all fuel-line connections for leaks by coating them with a solution of soap and water and watching for bubbles that indicate leaking gas. Light LP-gas grills according to the manufacturer's instructions. Turn off burner valves and the supply valve on the LP-gas cylinder when the grill is not in use. Never store an LP-gas grill indoors.

A REMINDER: YOU CAN NOT DO ANY TYPE OF COOKING ON A BALCONY. IT'S THE LAW!

Police Cast Wider Net To Fill Ranks

Takoma Park Police are going to Ocean City — but it's not to catch some sun. Rather, they hope to snag police recruits to fill in the force, which is still suffering from attrition. It's widely known that Ocean City and other resort communities hire temporary help over the summer, and those officers may be looking for more permanent work in the fall.

The recruitment outreach is part of an effort that also includes an expanded vehicle incentive program, that allows more officers to use take-home cruisers. In 2001, the City revamped the police retirement program, moving from a 38 percent at 30 year retirement to 50 percent at 25 years, similar to other area agencies. Also, the department offered a signing bonus to already-certified officers, removed the required written exam for academy graduates, and offered to reimburse academy graduates for their tuition.

The increased effort in recruiting and retaining officers addresses the five to 12 percent annual attrition rate — a reasonable range in the industry, but not in Takoma Park, which is still recovering from losing 24 percent of its police staff in 2001. That year three officers, with more than 80 years of police experience, retired in one evening, two officers medically retired, two left police work, and three went to different agencies. The events of 9/11/01 also changed the environment for public safety recruiting, especially in this metropolitan area, with new police departments starting, others expanding, and federal agencies offering better salaries and benefits. In the past 28 months, Takoma Park has hired 11 officers, a quarter of the agency's authorized strength of 41 sworn officers. Each hire requires months of processing, background investigation and testing. Despite the effort, the agency remains seven officers short of its authorized level with 13 officers leaving in the same period.

Here's how it happened: In 2004, the Department hired five officers, but lost four -- one to retirement, two to medical retirement, and a fourth who died after a long illness just after his retirement. In 2005, the agency hired four (one who did not complete field training) and lost four. A fifth officer left the agency in 2005 but returned in 2006 after sampling another agency.

Last September, the Takoma Park Police reserved three spots in the University of Maryland Police Academy, anticipating that it would hire candidates to send to training. Two Takoma Park cadets have since graduated, completed field training and now patrol independently on the streets. In July the Department asked UMPA to reserve five spaces for more candidates, and has embarked on a focused effort to identify and hire cadets for the classes that begin in late October.

Last year the recruiting team worked intensely with the Municipal Police Academy at Prince George's Community College, led by a former Takoma Park officer and the alma mater of numerous current officers. Academy students not contracted with another department were recruited, and six completed the Takoma Park exams. One withdrew when an agency with less stringent entry requirements made an offer, and three failed physical, psychological and polygraph testing. Two academy graduates were hired, but one left during field training, deciding police work was not his calling. The recruiting team continues to work with current "uncommitted" cadets at the academy.

The Ocean City recruiting project includes Sgt. Rick Bowers, who began his career as a seasonal employee there. It will include on-site written and oral exams, and the department hopes to find recruits for each of the five academy spots over the course of the visit — those cadets would take up field training in March 2007.

At the same time, Ofc. Paula Gaskin processes local applicants, including already-certified officers. Freed from patrol duties to concentrate on applicant processing, she's administered two officer written exams and one dispatcher exam this year, and facilitated 18 oral interviews, the second step in hiring, for officers and seven for dispatchers. With recruiting team members she's conducted background investigations, which must cover at least 10 years, for 11 officer candidates and five dispatchers.

Over the past year, in addition to standard newspaper classifieds outside the metropolitan area and in ethnic newspapers, the Department has instituted a presence on national and state internet job banks and on police web sites. Staff have reviewed resumes posted on the job banks and invited applications. Direct mailings have been sent to ethnic and women's organizations and religious institutions. Former Chief Cindy Creamer used her experience of rising from a dispatcher to the agency's CEO as an example of the Department's opportunities in presentations at youth centers and police academies.

This is the first in a two-part series on police recruiting. Next month will look at requirements for applicants and the selection process. For immediate information on applying to join the Takoma Park Police contact 301/891-7128 for Ofc. Paula Gaskin, A/Lt. Tyrone Collington or other team members.

POLICE NEWS

Sex Offender Alert Available

A new state service allows individuals to request automatic telephone notification when a registered sex offender moves into a community. The new hot line coincides with provisions in a new state law that mandates increased registration, prolonged parole, more frequent reporting to parole officers, submission of DNA samples and automatic notification of all schools (private as well as public) in the county where the offender resides.

To get a notification call when sex offenders move nearby:

- Call 1-866-559-8017
- Enter your phone number and selected ZIP code(s). You may register multiple contact phone numbers and zip codes.

When state officials receive notice that a registered sex offender is moving into that area, you will receive a notification call.

Website listings are also available. The Maryland state site includes a photograph as well as name, date of birth, age, address, address change date, charge, category of offense, and status (e.g., compliant, noncompliant with registration laws). It is located at www.dpscs.state.md.us/onlineservs/sor.

The Montgomery County Sex Offender Registry site is updated daily, although photographs are not posted. The website is reached through www.montgomerycountymd.gov by selecting "Departments," "Police," and "Sex Offender Registry." Information by e-mail may be requested at that site.

Montgomery County Police is the identified agency with which sex offenders register in the County. The Family Crime Division, Sex Offender Registry Unit may be reached at 240-773-5445.

Recycle Your Cell Phone For Safety

The Takoma Park Police have teamed with a city nonprofit group to make the recycling of used cell phones more convenient. Donations are coordinated by Secure the Call, a nonprofit coalition of more than 120 local organizations in the D.C. Metro-Baltimore area that provides the 9-1-1-only cell phones to at-risk community members.

The police lobby contains an enclosed barrel in which donors can leave used cell phones and any accessories, such as batteries, chargers, earphones and instruction books. Secure the Call, headquartered at 6950 Carroll Avenue, will pick up donations on a regular basis.

Secure the Call wipes the donated phones clean of any old numbers and address books. After charging, cleaning and testing, the group returns the phones to coalition partners who in turn distribute them to the community for use by seniors, domestic violence victims, bus drivers, and others.

Donations are tax deductible; a tax form is available at the group's website, www.securethecall.org. Anyone associated with a school, company, or other site that would like to host a cell phone recycling barrel can contact that website or call 301-891-2900.

to visitors. "I consider my house a community laboratory," he says — and an inspiration.

Meanwhile, on Holly Avenue, Bill Hutchins has another sort of lab operating. An architect focused on green building (www.HeliconWorks.com), he experiments with salvaged materials and products made from recycled material as well as energy-efficient utility systems and constructs. The result is a home full of surprises — a stair rail sculpted of scrap metal and pipe, recycled glass bathroom tile from a women's cooperative in Vermont, 90 percent recycled structural beams, kitchen counters pieced together from someone else's leftovers. Different kinds of wood create a variety of surfaces for walls and floors.

For energy efficiency, there's a corn stove for winter, supplemented by radiant floor heat from a biofuel furnace in the basement; the furnace uses renewable vegetable oil rather than petroleum products. Solar panels generate electricity, and a green roof of growing plants reduces stormwater runoff and cools the house at the same time.

On a larger scale, but just outside the city limits, Eastern Village Cohousing (EVC, near the Metro station), was named Green Project of the Year by the National Association of Home Builders, got a design award from Environmental Design and Construction magazine and a green roof award from Green Roofs for Healthy Cities. It also has a Silver LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) rating for elements such as recycled-content, rapidly renewable building materials, construction waste recycling, energy-efficient windows and appliances, water-saving plumbing fixtures and other eco-details.

Green on Top

Takoma Park now boasts three green roofs — the one on Hutchins' home, EVC, and a home on Woodland renovated to include a green roof in 2002. Nina Garfield, who owns that home, decided to transform a second-story deck into a green roof when she converted the porch below to an enclosed room. Hutchins was the architect.

"It creates a local ecosystem and creates a cooling effect, explains John Shepley, who installs green roofs and helped plant the one at Garfield's. "The best benefit is that they sequester the rainwater that falls on them," keeping pollution-saturated rainwater from flowing into the Bay. Ed Murtagh, chair of the stormwater committee for Friends of Sligo Creek, says a green roof is like a rain garden, just higher up. FOSC is encouraging individuals to plant both, using state funds recently made available for such projects (see <http://fosc.org/StormwaterMgmt.htm>). "We're trying to use these beautiful solutions to help the environment," says Murtagh.

Cooking with corn

Both Tidwell and Hutchins have corn stoves, but they are not the only ones. In fact, there are enough families — 45 — in Takoma Park and the surrounding area burning corn in their stoves to merit an "urban grain bin," the new term for a corn silo, set right at the city's Public Works station. A corn co-operative manages purchasing and pick-ups.

Burning corn is so clean that even when one considers the CO₂ emitted during its farm production, it has far less impact on the atmosphere. Tidwell explains that through no-till planting (which avoids release of CO₂ by turning the soil) and organic fertilization, and considering the CO₂ corn absorbs as it grows, burning corn releases 85 percent less CO₂ than natural gas.

Greasing the gears with biodiesel

Hybrid cars, which use a mix of gasoline and electricity, are more and more common around Takoma Park. Zip cars are also popular, and there are three in the immediate area, used by hundreds of locals who choose to pay an hourly or daily fee to use them, and avoid the cost of owning a vehicle and the temptation to drive it everywhere.

Bio-diesel is also making major inroads. Currently, a biodiesel collective based in Takoma Park purchases and brews fuel made from vegetable oil, rather than petroleum products. Takoma Parker Nadine Bloch, who has been using biodiesel since 1998, says the group is also trying to establish a biodiesel fueling station, either through the city or a private supplier.

Biodiesel comes in three flavors: waste vegetable oil (WVO), from commercial kitchens; straight vegetable oil (SVO), which is fresh; and a mix of conventional diesel and oil. Bloch gets her WVO from Mark's Kitchen. Each uses renewable resources, and 100 percent biodiesel produces almost 80 percent less carbon dioxide. City vehicles fueled by biodiesel use a 20 percent oil mix — though Bloch suggests they could run on 40, 60 or even 100 percent biodiesel. Drawbacks include cold-weather limitations (100 percent biodiesel coagulates in cooler temperatures) and less efficiency (it burns 10 percent faster than conventional diesel).

Bloch suggests that solutions like biodiesel are no final solution, however. "Long term solutions do not include everybody running on non-renewable resource-driven individual transport units," she says. "For me it's really about shifting the paradigm and that would mean changing our modus operandi from valuing money to valuing time."

Two wheels, two feet

Avoiding motorized vehicles altogether is an obvious way to cut down on emissions, and Takoma Park has more than its share of public transportation advocates as well as bike commuters and telecommuters who walk across a room to the "office."

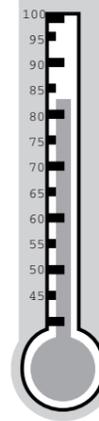

City Council passed a resolution supporting Bike to Work Day, a regional event that included at least 70 Takoma Parkers. The city recently installed 36 bike racks and has five more planned throughout the city. Maple Avenue is set to get bicycles painted on the street to indicate cars must share the lane. And to support public transportation, Takoma Park installed bus schedule and map holders at local stops. There has been some discussion about discounts for city employees on public transportation as well.

Eating for the environment

Related to transportation fuel consumption is food consumption — because the food travels an average 1,200 miles, trucked or flown in from distant farms, before it hits your plate. To avoid this environmental cost, many locals grown their own produce, or walk to the Farmer's Market and buy the locally grown goods there. The Takoma Park Silver Spring Co-op just launched an initiative to increase locally produced food — signs throughout the store indicate what products are from nearby purveyors. Even the chain groceries carry local produce.

Another popular way to ensure food is locally grown is Community Supported Agriculture, or CSA. Mike Tabor, an environmental advocate and farmer, runs a CSA that includes 15 Takoma Park households, plus a rac-

Tip of the Month

LOVE THE HEAT

Electric bills are soaring this year, right along with the temperatures. Learn to love the heat. Turn up the thermostat on your air conditioner — just two degrees warmer will keep 2,000 pounds of carbon dioxide emissions from polluting the air, and save you 10 percent off the cost of cooling. While you're at it, clean or replace the AC filter and make sure all the vents are clear of furniture and those piles of dirty laundry that accumulate on the floor.

Or, turn off the AC entirely, and go with ceiling fans, which do double duty by moving warm air around in winter. Take cool baths and go to bed with your hair wet. Spend hours in the grocery store, the library, the matinee — any place that's air conditioned, which is kind of cheating, but not so much.

coon who likes to help herself to fresh cherries. For a set fee, each member household picks up a box of straight-from-the-farm produce from the front porch of his Takoma Park home, once a week. Tabor accepts WIC and food stamps, and will trade time working on the farm in an effort to make fresh food available to low-income families.

Besides Tabor's CSA, there are at least a dozen others that serve the area, with pickup points in D.C. and suburban Maryland. At least one, Even' Star Farm, delivers "winter" produce, like greens and root vegetables. Deb Lindsley, who has used Even' Star, not only enjoyed the fresh veggies — she used the membership to teach her young children about where food is grown, by visiting the farm and picking her own produce.

Wrapping it up

The City's Committee on the Environment established Arbor Day, when hundreds of trees are given to residents; it's distributed tree care brochures, helped run rain barrel workshops, protected open space, and educated the city through web sites and articles.

There is a new effort to turn backyards into wildlife sanctuaries, through the National Wildlife Federation. More people are considering scrapping their gasoline lawn mowers for push mowers, and many are tearing out lawn altogether in favor of native plants that require fewer resources to maintain.

There are countless small acts that add up — turning light switches, using both sides of the paper, choosing neither plastic or paper but cloth bags for carrying groceries, walking to work.

We've recounted some of the more significant ones here. See the sidebar for more resources, and watch for a monthly environmental tip in each issue, to keep us all on track.

Likened to the Emmys for public, educational, and government access channels, the Hometown Video Festival celebrates the vast array of access programming throughout the country. The Alliance received over 1,400 entries for awards this year.

The Overall Excellence Award is the top award to access channels like City TV and reflects the myriad programming about City government and community activities available on City TV.

City TV also received an award in the category of Government Profile. This award was granted to City TV and Executive Producer Paula Rehr for a Snapshots Community Policing Segment called "Going to the Dogs." This segment features TPPD's canine teams with handlers, Cpl. Keith Largent and Cpl. Doug Malarkey, along with city businessman John Urciolo explaining how canine (K9) is used and its value in public safety. The Community Policing segment is a monthly feature of the Snapshots magazine series, and is co-produced by Paula Rehr and Police Department Public Affairs Specialist Carol Bannerman.

City TV received the Overall Excellence Award once before, in 2002. Numerous other awards over the last five years have included Government Programming Awards (GPA) for Performing Arts featuring the Takoma Jazz Band Brawl and Jazz Fests, and others from Hometown including "Humane Society PSA."
