Nominate Candidates for Mayor and City Council

By Virginia Myers

Have you always admired that neighbor who seems so well-organized during the annual block party? Or have you noticed the skill with which another neighbor handles sticky arguments involving the early morning roar of a lawn mower? How about that policy wonk who understands bureaucraticese and can distill an issue to its essence, then advocate for the best outcome? Or the person who brings up a point of view that never occurred to you, opening up discussions for broader consideration?

If you know someone like this - someone you think might be an effective mayor or member of the Takoma Park City Council — now is the time to give them a call to encourage them to run for office.

If they agree to run, you can nominate your candidate at the Nominating Caucus, September 29. You may also nominate yourself for office (but you do need someone to second your nomination).

All candidates must be, in the case of mayor, residents of the City of Takoma Park and, in the case of councilmembers, residents of the ward they are nominated to represent, and must have resided in the City or ward for at least six months preceding the election. They Nominations continue on page 5.

Creative Financing Fails to Save Restaurant Project

By Virginia Myers

A year ago, restaurateurs Gillian Clark and Robin Smith joined a group of Takoma Park residents who applauded them (along with the owners of Roscoe’s Pizzeria) for their plans to expand fine dining choices in Takoma Park. Kept busy answering questions about anticipated menu items and kid accommodations in their new restaurant, Avenue Oven, planned for the old Taliano’s space at 7001 Carroll Avenue in Old Town, they were optimistic about opening in December.

That would have been nine months ago. Several delays later, Clark and Smith have sent out notice to the neighbors that they’ve all but canceled their plans to open a restaurant in Takoma Park. “We have not given up but we are facing reality,” Clark told the Newsletter. “Short of a miracle there is not much we can do.”

The basics are this:

The concept for Avenue Oven was an Eastern European menu backed by Clark’s proven kitchen skills, familiar to anyone who has heard of her former D.C. restaurant, Colorado Kitchen, and to those who have tried her current fare at the new General Store in Silver Spring.

Many residents supported the project: A survey estimating in advance how many meals residents would buy in such a restaurant was used to show that there would be a market for the business (or for other restaurants in the area). Others supporters went farther, and plunked down $2,500 investments to help the Avenue Oven venture get off the ground.

Plans for a build-out of the interior moved slowly due to unforeseen construction requirements: reinforcement of ceiling frames, roof repair, relocation of water, electrical and gas lines, and some plumbing installation plus new WSSC standards involving grease traps, according to a blog post from Smith.

In July, according to emails circulated involving grease traps, according to a blog post from Smith.

City Considers Ban on Gas-Powered Leaf Blowers

By Rick Henry

Ah, the joys of fall. Cooler temperatures, changing colors and falling leaves — lots and lots of falling leaves. Leaves that ultimately must be removed from lawns, sidewalks and public spaces.

For many people the preferred weapon in attacking the problem is the gas-powered leaf blower — modern, efficient ... and noisy.

Others, such as Steve Davies, prefer a more old school approach. Davies, a resident of Poplar Avenue, is a member of the self-proclaimed “Rake Brigade,” which turns out en masse in local parks to rake leaves before the leaf blowers arrive.

Davies is also one of approximately 30 Takoma Park environmental professionals and activists who have been urging the City Council to ban the use of gas-powered leaf blowers in the City.

“Whether you’re a professional landscaper or a homeowner, we all agree that the blowers are bad news,” he says. “I observed them being used and I talked to a lot of people in town who felt they were a nuisance (just like I did).”

From those initial conversations an alliance was born. The initiative officially took flight last October when the group, Green Our City, presented a letter to Mayor Bruce Williams requesting that the City take action.

According to the letter, “these devices rely on remarkably inefficient, two-cycle gas-oil engines. Their loud whine can be heard for blocks. But as annoying as their noise is, it is the machines’ contribution to air pollution that leads us to conclude that the city should ban them.”

An initial work session in January addressed the issue and with fall just around the corner, the City Council revisited the ban possibility in earnest at a July 20 work session.

While City Council members generally shared the activists’ concerns and believed that the blowers were both a noise nuisance and environmental problem, they also had some practical concerns with passing and, more importantly, enforcing such a ban.

“If we ban, who enforces?” asked Ward 3 Council member Dan Robinson. “My concern is how much it would cost to enforce the leaf-blowing ban.”

Performing Arts Center Opens for Fall
Aretha Franklin Booked for Preview Concert September 11

By Virginia Myers

The building looks ready, all sleek angles and glass and that alluring view of a dance studio, visible from high windows overlooking the street. Even the electronic marquis is scrolling, but so far it doesn’t say much. “Welcome to Montgomery College.”

The Takoma Park/Silver Spring Performing Arts Center is almost ready for prime time – but not quite. The building, part of the Takoma Park campus of Montgomery College, is open for students to take fall classes in film, music, speech, dance and theater. Classes, say administrators, were a priority. But a full schedule of performances will come later: the grand opening is scheduled for some time in February, when the Israel Ballet performs, complete with gala celebration.

Meanwhile, the very first performer in the theater will be the Queen of Soul, Aretha Franklin, who will step on stage for a preview concert this month, on September 11. Tickets went on sale in July and are likely sold out – but information is available about other performances at 240-567-5775.

Montgomery College is hoping that once it begins its full season of presentations, after February, the new Performing Arts Center will anchor the Silver Spring Arts District. Its location at the corner of Georgia Avenue and East West Highway sets it at the southern end of the district, near high rise housing and a handful of other attractions – like the Mayorga Coffee Factory on Georgia, Pyramid Atlantic art studio, the historic train station, the public mosaic under the metro bridge, and the building’s companion in arts, the Morris and Gwendolyn Cafritz Art Center, where Montgomery College’s School of Art and Design is located.

The Performing Arts Center is designed to present concerts and events not only for the college but for the larger community. A 500-seat music and dance theater includes state-of-the-art stage and acoustics, and will be rented to outside performers. A smaller, 100-seat theater, will be used by the school’s Communications and Performing Arts Department and by regional theater groups and organizations. It will also double as classroom space.

Although the season of performances has not been set, organizers expect it will include a diverse array of offerings, reflecting the multicultural nature of the school. There will be theater, music and dance from local and international artists, booked year round.

The College is also emphasizing the opportunities the new facility will give its students. Not only will performances enhance curriculum with relevant concerts, theater and dance — they may also serve as an introduction to the performing arts for students who have never seen live, professional performance before.

More information about the coming season will be announced through local media once a roster of artists is established. And you can always keep an eye on that marquis.

Robinson has studied the issue first-hand, visiting Palo Alto and Piedmont, two communities in California that have banned leaf blowers. Despite having different codes, both have had issues with enforcement, he said.

“In Piedmont, the owner of the property where the leaf blower is being used is cited,” Robinson said in a follow-up interview. “In Palo Alto, the owner of the leaf blower is cited, which means it is often small businesses who are cited.”

Robinson pointed out that many conflicts have occurred pitting residents against residents and between residents and small businesses.

“And someone has to pay for enforcement,” he said. “Both of these communities are very wealthy and they just sucked it up and hired someone to enforce the code.”

The Council members, City Manager Barbara Matthews and Public Works Director Daryl Braithwaite discussed possible enforcement options (Public Works vs. police force) and whether the city should ban the use of leaf blowers by city employees as opposed to instituting a broad city-wide ban covering residents and businesses.

“I think there are two components,” said Ward 1 Councilmember Josh Wright. “One, should the city stop using gas-powered leaf blowers? I would say we vote ‘yes’ to that today.

“As to the question of whether they should be banned more broadly, I propose that we put that issue to the [new city environmental] task force so that they can do a cost-benefit analysis and explore how enforcement would be handled.”

Ward 6 Councilmember Donna Victoria informed the Council that the Environmental Protection Agency is scheduled to address the issue of lawn equipment and is issues new regulations in 2011.

“They are expected to issue regulations that will require significant reductions in ground-level emissions from lawn equipment,” she said. “I don’t agree with banning without investigating what the 2011 standards may be.”

In a follow-up interview, Victoria reiterated her position.

“I believe a national approach is what we need. Since we know these restrictions are coming down the pike, the problems of banning leaf blowers now outweigh the benefits.”

Concerns aired, the Council opted not to take any action and will leave it to the environmental task force to address the issue.

Drawing upon another rite of fall – football – Robinson said of the Council’s actions on the ban, “We are putting it to the task force.”

“What I would like to see [from the task force] is a matrix of where our energies are best used,” he said. “If the task force suggests that this is an easy problem to address and can provide a lot benefit then we can move forward at that time.”

For Davies, however, the case is closed.

“I believe it’s incumbent upon the people who think the gas-powered leaf blowers should be used to prove the benefits,” he said. “I agree that banning things isn’t always the best solution, however, in this case there are simple alternatives.

“This is not a radical notion. It’s a health issue. Lawn equipment accounts for a healthy percentage of ozone depletion.”

However, it looks as though gas-powered leaf blowers and those that use them, have persevered — for another fall season at least.
The tenant’s failure to provide his landlord with a written notice of his intent to vacate the rental unit may result in a reduction of his security deposit refund. A tenant is strongly advised to provide her/his landlord with 30 days notice of pending intent to vacate at the end of the lease term. Failure to provide the written notice may result in the tenant incurring an additional month’s rental being charged which could be deducted by the landlord from the security deposit refund. Tenants should also be aware that staying even one day past the indicated vacate date or failing to return the key(s) to the rental unit on the indicated vacate date may also result in the tenant having an additional full month of rent deducted from the security deposit refund.

It is the responsibility of the tenant to have documentation of when the landlord received the intent to vacate notice, therefore it is strongly recommended that the tenant mail the notice by a method that will result in his/her receiving written confirmation of when it is received by the landlord. The notice of intent to vacate should also be sent by regular mail allowing for three business days mail transit time from mailing to delivery. Tenants are advised not to send their intent to vacate notice by electronic mail or rely on verbal communications since neither the receipt date of an e-mail communication nor the content of a verbal communication can be documented by the tenant.

The current security deposit interest rate for all City tenants and landlords having questions regarding the Takoma Park Landlord-Tenant Law are requested to call 301-891-7215 and/or contact us via the web at MosesW@ takomapark. org.

On June 24, the Commission on Landlord-Tenant Affairs (COLTA) issued a decision regarding the Tenant Association’s allegations that the landlord/management company had (1) caused a defective tenancy because tenants of apartments with balconies had been denied access to their balconies since 2004 and additionally that the air conditioning system at 7401 New Hampshire Avenue was inappropriate in July 2008; (2) issued an improper notice to vacate on 4/23/09 to selected tenants residing at 7333 New Hampshire Avenue requiring these tenants to vacate their apartments by 6/30/09. The Tenant Association representing the tenants of 7333 and 7401 New Hampshire Avenue filed their complaint as an emergency because of the pending notice to vacate issue and sought as relief an award of $150 per month as damages to each affected tenant for the loss of use of their balconies, a one-time payment award of $120 to each affected tenant as damages for the loss of air conditioning in July 2008 and requested that the April 2009 Notices to Vacate be rescinded.

The commission’s decision to deny the tenant association’s request that the notices to vacate be rescinded relied on Sec. 6.16.170 of the city’s Landlord-Tenant Law. The Commission held that when a landlord fails to offer a one-year lease renewal or fails to provide the tenant with a written statement of good cause for not offering such a renewal, the tenant’s right to assert a one tenancy expires if not exercised within one year after the expiration of the tenant’s last express one year lease term. Based on this interpretation only tenants with a one year lease term ending after June 30, 2008 (one year prior to the termination date under the April Notice to Vacate) would be eligible to assert they were not month to month tenants which they would have had to have asserted no later than January 31, 2007, one year after the expiration of the last one year lease term. Since no tenant exercised their right to claim a one year tenancy until May 12, 2009 (the complaint filing date) their tenancies were determined to be month-to-month and the Notices to Vacate were deemed as lawful notices to vacate.

The commission’s decision to deny the tenant association’s defective tenancy allegation regarding the air conditioning outage at 7401 New Hampshire Avenue in July 2008 reflected its reliance on Sec. 6.16.170(a) of the city’s Landlord-Tenant Law which holds a landlord liable for a defective tenancy if the landlord fails to correct a defect or make good faith efforts to do so within one week of receiving notice of the defect. Based on testimony from an association officer and association members that the air conditioning system was repaired within ten days after it stopped working, and the failure of the tenant association to present evidence that the landlord failed to make timely good faith efforts to have the air conditioning system repaired within one week of learning that it was broken the commission ruled that the landlord was not liable for the July 2008 outage.

The commission’s decision finding that the landlord was liable for a defective tenancy for failing to correct the defect within one week of receiving notice pointed out that the fact the defect remained uncorrected for more than a year after the landlord received notice of it, and the landlord’s failure to present any evidence of having ever made or having any future intent to make efforts to correct the defect confirmed the landlord’s failure to make timely good faith efforts.

Finally, the commission found that the balcony closures reduced the values of the affected tenancies in the amount of $30 per month and awarded this amount to each tenant with a locked off balcony who had authorized the association to represent them a rent refund of $30 per month starting on June 1, 2008 (the first rent due date within year one preceding the complaint filing date) and continuing through June 1, 2009 for a total of $390 per affected rental unit.

On June 25, 2009, Respondent Tenancy New Hampshire, LLC filed a Motion For Reconsideration of the part of the June 18 decision that failed to reduce the award of damages to tenants who had previously accepted a $30 rent credit for May and June 2009 as compensation for the loss of use of their balconies. The respondent’s motion requested that the commission’s award to those tenants should be reduced by $60. The commission’s July 9, 2009 Order On Reconsideration following the respondent’s submission of documentation not provided at the COLTA Hearing granted the respondent’s motion.

City tenants and landlords having questions regarding the Takoma Park Landlord-Tenant Law are requested to call 301-891-7215 and/or contact us via the web at MosesW@ takomapark. org.
Sing Along at Folk Fest Sept. 13

BY NANCY NICKELL

T he 32nd Takoma Park Folk Festival is coming up, Sunday, September 13, 11 a.m. to 6:30 p.m., bringing plenty of opportunity to raise your voice in tribute to folk music and, in particular, folk legend Pete Seeger. Each of the seven stages will conclude with a different sing-along tribute to Seeger, in celebration of his 90th birthday.

There will be plenty of other music, too, with 49 performances including hip-hop, blues, African dance music, rockabilly, swing, string-band, and samba along with high-energy folk from Ireland, Scotland and Appalachia, and singer/songwriters of all stripes.

Festivalgoers can dance all day at the Lenore Robinson Dance Stage, where they can not only Waltz, but belly dance, or try Scandinavian couple dances. The Grassy Nook Stage, for kids, will feature all young performers. A complete, printable list of performances is available at www.tpf.org.

Also, dozens of local nonprofits will have informational tables. Admission, performances and dancing are free at this all-volunteer event, but festivalgoers can certainly spend money. Children may play games for small fees. Performers will sell CDs. A juried craft fair of items designed and made by the artists will feature works from about 30 creators. Pottery, jewelry, fiber, photography and mixed media works will be for sale.

Lots of food vendors will offer all sorts of dishes, including vegetarian fare, grilled meat, Italian ice, smoothies and fresh-squeezed juices. Again this year, the vendors will turn over their used cooking oil to be made into biodiesel.

In this 40th anniversary year of Woodstock, the media is filled with stories on that event’s history and meaning. The Takoma Park Folk Festival is here and now – bursting with its own unique spirit. Enhance that spirit by volunteering on festival day.

Most shifts are two hours long. More detail on the jobs can be found here: http://tpf.org/09/volInfo.htm. To volunteer, please send a message now volunteer@tpf.org.

The festival will be held at the Takoma Park Folk Festival. It will also be held in Old Town Takoma Park, along Carroll Avenue.

Gevorgyan Paintings in Gallery 3

The oil paintings of Russian-born, Armenian-raised Suren Gevorgyan are influenced by his cultural background, elements of decorative art (he is a professional interior and exterior designer) and an affinity for the work of Dalí, Picasso, Miro and Rothko. His recent work uses multiple layers of color applied with a palette knife or special plate. “This technique, in my view, makes every layer of color an active element of the composition,” he says. “What appeals to me in abstractionism is a near or total absence of a subject, allowing for a free associative perception of the painting and making the viewer a participant in the creative process.”

Gevorgyan’s paintings will be in Gallery 3 in the Community Center, from September 1-30. An opening reception will be held September 5 at 2 p.m.

Takoma Artists Guild Shows Local Work

The Takoma Artists Guild, dedicated to artistic growth, will exhibit work from eight of its members, in the Astrum gallery at the Community Center from September 2-28. The show will include paintings, drawings, water color, collage and photographs. An opening reception will be held September 4 at 6 p.m.

“Toys of Chance” Combines Sculpture, Poetry

Sculptor Mark Behme’s show, Toys of Chance, with words and poems by Joanne Grownwy, is a fanciful collection of bright color on carved wood. Imagine a 50s-type heart throb with ears on springs, or a guitar neck that swings from a woman’s body.

“This new collection continues my interest in surrealism and symbolism utilizing the figure to make new alliances expressing mood, emotion, attitude, and a contemporary outlook on man’s relation to himself and others,” says Behme.

The show, in the display cases of the Community Center (between the library and the computer center), runs from September 8 through October 21, with a reception September 11 at 6 p.m. Behme is a Washington, D.C.-based artist represented by Gallery Neptune in Bethesda. His work can be seen at www.markbehme.com.

Going Back to School the Safe Way

By Cpl. Paula Gaskin

School is back in session, and many children will be on their own for part of the day as they make their way to classes. Here are some important tips to keep you safer:

Tips for Kids

1. Always let your parents know where you are.
2. Always try to play or walk with friends.
3. Say NO if a stranger offers you gifts or asks you to help find something, like a lost dog.
4. If anyone, even someone you know, tries to do something that makes you feel "funny" or unsafe, say NO. And always tell someone you trust about it, like your parents or a teacher.
5. Never get into a car with a stranger or with someone you don't trust.
6. Never go anywhere with a stranger or with someone you don't trust.
7. Never believe a stranger until you have checked what he or she has said with someone you trust.
8. Never open the door to a stranger when you are home alone or to someone you don't trust.
9. Never give any information to a stranger over the Internet or telephone.

Tips for School Bus Riders

1. Do not play in the street while waiting for the bus.
2. Carry all loose belongings in a bag or backpack and never reach under the school bus to get anything that has rolled or fallen beneath it.
3. Line up facing the bus, not along side it.
4. Move immediately onto the sidewalk and out of traffic after getting off the bus.
5. Wait for a signal from the bus driver before crossing the street and walk at least 10 steps away from the front of the bus so that the driver can see you.

Tips for Pedestrians or Bike Riders

1. Never walk alone – always travel with a buddy. Try to find a friend, or make a new friend in the neighborhood to walk to school or ride the bus with.
2. Wear reflective or bright color clothing to increase visibility.
3. Obey traffic lights and street signs as the law applies to you.
4. Always wear a helmet when riding a bicycle.
5. Avoid loose fitting clothing that could get caught in spokes or pedals.

Tips for Car Drivers and Passengers

1. Make sure young children are in safety seats at all times, and that the seats have properly been installed.
2. All children under 13 years old should ride in the rear seat of vehicles.
3. Remember that many crashes occur while novice teen drivers are going to and from school. You may want to limit the number of teen passengers to prevent driver distraction. Do not allow your teen to drive while eating, drinking or talking/texting on a cell phone.

Texting and Driving: a Deadly Combination

By Cathy Plyev

Cell phones are popular among teens and adults alike, but while they are convenient and fun, the driving tragedies that have occurred while text messaging behind the wheel have increased in frequency. You may not be the one texting or manipulating your phone in some other distracting way, but if someone else on the road is, we are all in danger of being in a potentially fatal car accident.

While teens are big offenders when it comes to driving and texting, theirs is not an exclusive club. Adults, too, are texting or conducting other business by cell phone while driving, frequently paying no attention to the road, other drivers, or even pedestrians.

According to the Insurance Information Institute (I.I.I., the United States Federal government estimates that 30 percent of all crashes involve some type of driver distraction. Additionally, a recent study by Students Against Destructive Decisions (SADD) and Liberty Mutual Insurance Group, found that 37 percent of teens consider text messaging while driving extremely distracting. However, that has not stopped them from participating in this dangerous driving behavior.

For your own safety, and the safety of others, teach your young drivers the following rules and help them avoid dangerous driving distractions. And certainly practice what you preach.

- Pull off the road if you must place a call or text. Do not drive while calling or texting.
- Use speed dialing or voice-activated dialing if you must make a call while driving.
- If your cell phone rings, let your voice-mail take the call. You can call back later when you are not driving.

- Know when to stop talking. If the conversation is long, emotional or stressful continue it when you are not driving.
- Do not take notes while driving. If you don't want to forget a note, use a tape recorder or pull off the road.
- Do not eat or drink while driving.
- Groom yourself at home, not in the vehicle.

There are so many other distractions, in addition to using a cell phone, that have been seen while driving on the road. People have been seen crocheting, nursing their children, eating bowls of cereal, brushing teeth, reading maps, books and newspapers, applying make-up, programming a GPS, using a lap top computer, etc. The list is endless.

Imagine being in your vehicle, distracted, then looking up to find yourself ready to run over someone's child, mother, father, grand- mother or grandfather. It will change your life forever.

Please pay attention to the road ahead – not just for your own safety, but for the safety of everyone on the road, driving, bicycling or walking.

Local Takoma Park Officers Promoted to Corporal

Effective August 3, Private First Class Paula Gaskin and Private First Class Thomas Black, of the Takoma Park Police Department, have both been promoted to the rank of Corporal. Chief Ricucci wishes Cpl. Gaskin and Cpl. Black good luck in their new positions.

Baby Sitter's Training Class

As of July 31, the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department and the personnel of the Montgomery County Fire and Rescue Service assigned to the Takoma Park station have responded to 444 fire-related incidents in 2009. The department handled or assisted with 1,620 rescue or ambulance related incidents, for a total of 2,064 this year. Totals for 2008 were 431 and 1,661 respectively, for a total of 2,092, representing a decrease of 28 incidents.

High-Rise Evacuation: Be Prepared

Building features such as smoke alarms, automatic fire sprinkler systems and modern construction used in today's high-rise office buildings, apartments, hotels and healthcare facilities make these buildings safe.

- Fire in high-rise buildings seldom spreads beyond the floor where it starts.
- The majority of people who have died in high-rise apartment fires were close to the fire when it started.

Special Evacuation Planning

Your high-rise escape plan may be to leave immediately when you hear an alarm. Sometimes, however, it's safest to stay in the building, away from the fire, and wait to be rescued.

- If you discover a fire, sound the alarm and call the fire department.
- Follow instructions (sometimes given over your building's public-address system).
- Follow your building's evacuation plan, unless doing so puts you in danger.
- If you live or work in a building more than six stories in height, you may need a special evacuation plan.

Be Prepared

- Know what you're expected to do, and participate in fire drills.
- Learn the sound of your building's fire alarm.
- Memorize the locations of your building's fire alarm pull stations, and learn how to use them.
- Post fire department and other emergency numbers near all telephones.
- Know at least two escape routes from every room in your office, apartment, or condo, and learn at least two exits from your building.

If You Leave The Building

- Exit quickly, closing all doors behind you to slow the spread of fire and smoke.
- If you have to escape through smoke, crawl low under the smoke on your hands and knees, keeping your head one to two feet above the floor, where the air will be the cleanest.
- Test the doorknob and spaces around the door with the back of your hand. If the door is warm, try another escape route. If it's cool, open it slowly. Close it slowly, if smoke pours through.
- Never use an elevator to evacuate, unless directed by the fire department.
- Once you're out, tell the fire department if anyone is trapped in the building. Do not go back inside.

A special note: You cannot do any type of cooking on your balcony. It's the law!

Eric Rasch, new Recreation Manager for the City of Takoma Park is exactly where he wants to be. A graduate of the University of Missouri at Kansas City, Rasch worked for the recreation department of that city before friends here recommended he move to Takoma Park in January 2009. "It’s a real community with great diversity, just what I was looking for," says Rasch.

As Recreation Manager, Rasch’s duties include managing facilities, ordering supplies and creating partnerships, but his real enthusiasm is for the Department’s programs, especially the Y.E.S. (Youth Exposed to Success) Basketball League. Rasch calls it both a Takoma Park tradition (it has been running for about 20 years) and a quality program for city youth.

"[It] gives every participant who registers a chance to play," he explains. "While there are no tryouts like some other leagues, we make sure our players participate in workouts and drills that would make them competitive on any team.

This year we recruited 72 players. Takoma Park should be proud that our coaches and scorekeepers are concerned community residents who really care about the players and take an interest in the League." Rasch, who likes politics (he attends most City Council meetings), drawing (he helped design the Y.E.S. T-shirts) and traveling, and who has a fondness for Caribbean food, says living and working here allows him to be on both the giving and receiving end of community service.

Recreation Department Director Debra Haiduven is pleased he’s settling in so well. “Eric has been a fabulous addition to our staff,” she says. “He has made a huge difference in our programs by bringing new ideas, lots of energy and great humor to everything he does. We really like that he’s brought a personal approach to everything he does and to everyone involved in our programs.”
Banned Book Week Celebrates Intellectual Freedom

By Karen MacPherson

During the week of September 26-October 3, we’ll celebrate Banned Books Week. It’s a special time at our library, a time when we put copies of “banned” books on display to encourage patrons – young and old – to check them out, and we proudly hang “I read banned books” signs in our adult and children’s sections.

Plus, we’ve got our award-winning Banned Books Club, whose middle school-aged members gather monthly to discuss a banned book.

Just what are banned books? Well, few books actually end up banned in the United States. But there are hundreds of challenges to books each year around the nation. The American Library Association estimates that it hears of one in every five book challenges; most challenges are never reported.

Book challenges most often are made by parents to materials on the shelves of school libraries. But public libraries also get their share of challenges. Our library fortunately has never faced a book challenge, a reflection of the value that Takoma Park residents put on intellectual freedom.

People challenge books for a variety of reasons: violence, sexual content, “unsuited to age group,” witchcraft and – one of the biggest reasons today – opposition to books with homosexual themes or characters. Most challenges are unsuccessful and the books are retained on the shelves of school and public libraries.

The most challenged book last year, as in 2007, was a picture book, And Tango Makes Three, a book by Justin Richardson and Peter Parnell that’s based on the true story of how two male penguins at the Central Park Zoo raised a baby penguin together. Other books among last year’s Top 10 included the His Dark Materials trilogy by Philip Pullman, and The Kite Runner by Khaled Hosseini.

In fact, if you look at the list of challenged books, it’s essentially a list of classic books that make worthwhile and interesting reading. And that’s where our Banned Books Club comes in.

Our club was the brainchild of Takoma Park eighth grade Alanna Natanson. In the year since the club’s creation, we’ve read all kinds of great books, from To Kill a Mockingbird, Robert Cormier’s seminal young adult novel to Harper Lee’s To Kill a Mockingbird to Bridge To Terabithia and The Great Gilly Hopkins, both by former Takoma Park resident Katherine Paterson.

One month we focused on picture books, such as In the Night Kitchen by Maurice Sendak, Heather Has Two Mommies by Leslea Newman and, of course, And Tango Makes Three. Other months we’ve explored more somber topics as we discussed One Day In the Life of Ivan Denisovich by Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn and Anne Frank’s The Diary of a Young Girl.

Our Banned Books Club is open to all readers of middle school age, and we’ve developed a core of regulars who love to delve deeply into books and share what they’ve learned with others. These are kids who take delight in navigating difficult texts, and who are outraged that so many of books they’ve enjoyed have been challenged by those who think they don’t belong in school and public libraries.

We open each hour-and-a-half meeting by reading the list of challenges to our chosen book as compiled in Banned Books: 2007 Resource Guide, a wonderfully comprehensive volume by Robert Doyle (and published by ALA). This opening tradition was the kids’ idea: they love hearing the often-repetitive litany of challenges they’ve just read and enjoyed. Reading the challenges helps focus our discussion and inevitably gets us talking about all kinds of important issues, everything from bullying to racism to war. Our discussions are always lively and energetic as club members have strong opinions and love to share them.

As the winner of the American Library Association’s 2009 John Phillip Immromth Intellectual Freedom Award, we hope that our Banned Books Club will inspire others to create their own clubs and celebrate the freedom to read.

So this year on Banned Books Week, come on in, check out a banned book and join our celebration of intellectual freedom. And, if you’re a middle-schooler, come join the vibrant discussions at our Banned Books Club!

It’s unlikely the citizen effort will save Avenue Oven. Short of a miraculous infusion of $150,000 – “all we need to keep the restaurant alive,” according to Clark – the resolution of a "faux dream contribution.

And, she wrote, there is a bright side to this story: the space is now ready and waiting for a new restaurant, even if it isn’t theirs. Landlord Levin says he is talking to prospective tenants, though the space needs further renovation.

Clearly there will be an eager community waiting for its doors to open.
