Myofascial release, immigration law, discount services also open

By Virginia Myers

After months of vacancy, two storefronts at Takoma Junction will soon be occupied by two new, independent businesses: Spring Mill Bakery, known for its all-natural breads and sweets; and MAD Fitness, a mother-daughter enterprise offering personal training and fitness programs.

Spring Mill is known as a “small batch baker,” and has four locations in the Washington Metro area – Bethesda, Capitol Hill, Gaithersburg and Rockville. The Takoma Park location, at 7300 Carroll Ave., will offer soft crust breads, sweets, soups and sandwiches in a café setting. Renovations of the 1,800 square foot space will precede an anticipated fall 2014 opening, and will include space for both indoor and outdoor seating.

“The management and bakers at the Spring Mill Bread Co. are very excited to have finally secured a location in Takoma Park,” owner

Takoma Park librarian profiled online

The Takoma Park Library’s head children’s librarian, Karen MacPherson, was recently honored with an online profile and video about her work on “Vox Populi,” a feature of the Politics and Prose book store web site (www.politics-prose.com/vox-populi). Literally “voice of the people,” the series features quirky interviews with customers, authors, politicians, community leaders, neighbors and others about the books they love and their literary preferences. There’s also an 8-minute video of MacPherson at work, sharing her thoughts about the expanding role of the library as a community center and literary salon, the importance of connecting young readers to all sorts of reading, from picture books to audio books, and the joy of community engagement.

As it turns out, being a children’s librarian is about a whole lot more than singing “Wiggle your Fingers” with a

Budget passes, includes slight revenue increase

Quality of life expenditures, sustainability initiatives lead council changes

By Virginia Myers

The City Council has unanimously passed an FY2015 budget of $27 million. On a 4 to 2 vote, the council voted to maintain the tax rate at 57 cents per $100 of assessed real property value, increasing revenues by about $118,000. Residential property owners who have lived in their homes for more than a year will see little change in their property tax bill. Most increased revenue will come from increased property value on recently purchased properties or commercial properties.

Had the tax rate been kept at the “constant yield rate,” it would have been 56.4 cents per $100 of assessed value. Councilmembers Tim Male (Ward 2) and Jarrett Smith (Ward 5) voted against the 57-cent rate, as they favored a constant yield rate. In an earlier straw vote, Councilmember Terry Seamens also voted against the 57-cent rate. All other councilmembers present at the meeting May 19 voted in favor.

Two public hearings on the overall budget as proposed by City Manager Brian Kenner were held, on April 7 and 28. Several residents testified to request funding for particular projects (the dog park, for example) and to question the reserve funds, deficits and other details within the budget structure.

A few increases

Highlights of the FY2015 budget remain essentially as they were proposed (and as reported in the April issue of the Newsletter), with the exception of a few increases. Those changes were the result of two months of budget work sessions and the two public hearings. These changes, called budget reconciliation, include:

- Additional $10,000 for a recognition task force and anniversary celebration of the city’s 125th anniversary of incorporation
- Additional $20,000 (for a total $270,000) for sustainability program initiatives such as the sustainability coordinator position, food waste composting expansion, energy action plan consulting and Safe Grow anti-pesticide policy implementation
- Additional $15,000 for Carroll Avenue bridge construction detours

Nuclear Free Takoma for the new millennia

An iconic committee updates its database and continues its mission

By Rick Henry

Thirty years after its formation, the Nuclear-Free Takoma Committee remains a powerful energy force.

Its influence over the city government is still prominent and its members are still passionate, even if its mission is often misunderstood.

The city's standing as a Nuclear Free Zone, one of only approximately 130 such jurisdictions in the United States, is well-known and often cited as a classic example of the type of ordinance that helps define the so-called "People's Republic of Takoma Park." Declaring a ban on nuclear weapons and nuclear waste, it is viewed by many as outdated – "No Nukes" was a long time ago – and impractical – what about X-rays at the hospital?

Both critiques are badly off the mark, say committee members.

An issue for today

"This issue is more important today than it's ever been," says committee member Paul Gunter. "Nuclear weapons are still a threat to civilization. There are more nuclear possessing countries than ever."

"Nuclear power is a ticking time bomb," adds Polly Kanazaki, another committee member. Kanazaki has lived in Japan and says the Fukushima nuclear power plant incident in 2011 is a powerful reminder of the dangers of nuclear power.

Committee members also point to concerns over disposing of and transporting nuclear waste – the latter an issue that could directly affect the area of Takoma Park that parallels the railroad track along Eastern/Takoma Avenue. And it declares its intent to influence policy-makers so that they re-route resources for nuclear weaponry and nuclear power and instead "promote and enhance life," with services such as child care, housing, schools, health care, public transportation, energy conservation and jobs.

Jay Levy, one of the founding committee members and its current chair, stresses that educating the public about the dangers of nuclear weapons and nuclear power is one of the committee's most important functions. "It's always been part of our mission to inform [the public]," says Levy, who wrote the initial draft of the law that was submitted to the City Council in 1983. The committee continues to reach out at street festivals and other public events, offering literature and information about nuclear

Jay Levy, left, one of the Nuclear Free Takoma Committee founders and its current chair, was honored with the Sammie Award, named for former Takoma Park Mayor Sam Abbott, at the 20th anniversary celebration of the city's status as a nuclear free zone last year. weaponry and nuclear energy.

Fearful beginnings

At the time the nuclear free status was established, the Cold War with Russia was very much alive and nuclear fears were omnipresent, culminating in the ABC movie, "The Day After," which showed the effects of a nuclear attack. It was watched by more than 100 million people and spurred lots of activist and civic action.

In that spirit, Levy crafted a document declaring Takoma Park a nuclear free zone. Sam Abbott, the city's mayor at the time, was a major proponent. The document was submitted and immediately accepted by the City Council and, per the charter, the Nuclear-Free Takoma Committee was created.

"A lot of people don't understand the ordinance [Chapter 14.04 of the Takoma Park Municipal Code], but if they read it, they would clearly understand what it means and what's involved," says Levy. "It is quite literal."

The ordinance prohibits producing, storing or transporting nuclear weapons within the city – a policy that has admittedly prompted some eye-rolling among outsiders who point out that such activity is unlikely in a leafy suburb like Takoma Park. But transportation is a real threat, as noted in 2004 when a proposal to ship nuclear waste to Nevada involved routing it along CSX tracks through Takoma Park (the proposal appears to be dormant now).

The ordinance also bans the city from investing in or contracting with any company that is connected to the manufacture of nuclear weapons – a commitment that has proved to be a challenge.

No nuke contracts

It is the committee's job to review all existing and proposed city contracts, purchase orders and investments to insure that Takoma Park does not do business with any companies that are involved with the production of nuclear weapons. While nuclear weaponry may seem far from something a municipality would encounter, many corporations have a broad range of products. For example, Honeywell International, which sells thermostats, humidifiers and GPS systems, among other things, produces non-nuclear components for nuclear weapons, according to NukeWatch and others.

In Takoma Park, purchases and contracts reviewed might involve police vehicles, building maintenance supplies or office equipment. (Among the exemptions are medical devices and research as well as applications that use fissionable materials, such as smoke detectors and light-emitting watches and clocks.)

"The city comes to us and if we say 'no' [you can't do business with this company], then they have to get a waiver," says Levy.

The task has grown increasingly difficult in recent years as corporations have diversified and expanded their acquisitions, and governments and corporations have become less transparent. Sources of information about which companies are involved with the nuclear industry have also disappeared – most notably, the regularly updated list supplied by the now-defunct Nuclear Free America, was last published in 2002. "It has become very hard to track down the information," says longtime member Julie Boddy.

One particular incident highlights her point. In 2012, the Takoma Park Library purchased a desk-top computer system made by Hewlett-Packard. The purchase was made through a company called Useful, which handled the library's computer orders and tech support. Useful had no ties to the nuclear industry, but the committee informed the mayor and the council that Hewlett-Packard did. The committee recommended the deal be scrapped, but the mayor and council said reversing the purchase would be too costly and drain too many resources. They approved a waiver, and purchased the computers.

The incident spurred the committee to update its databases and, as it turned out, at the time of the purchase Hewlett-Packard was no longer involved in nuclear weapons contracts. The database they'd been using was out of date.

The committee is now tasked with researching and providing recommendations for an updated database on companies with nuclear ties.

A personal commitment

The committee is also pushing governments and individuals to go a step further by divesting from any financial institutions that invest in nuclear companies. It references "Don't Bank on the Bomb," a 284-page report identifying 298 financial institutions in 30 countries that invest heavily in companies involved in the U.S., British, French, Indian and Israeli nuclear weapon programs.

"We want people to start from their own situation," said Kanazaki. "Someone can go to the website www.dontbankonthebomb.com, read the report and look up his/her own personal investments and make a decision about whether to divest."

Such strategies are not only in line with the committee's agenda, members say, but with Takoma Park in general.

"Boycott is a tool for social change," says Gunter. "It is a demonstration of open government and direct participation."

"I am honored that the city has taken on this whole issue of boycotting nuclear weapons manufacturers and proud of the fact that we as a community buy nuclear-free electricity."

Indeed, Takoma Park's electrical power comes from renewable, solar and wind power, a powerful and long-lasting testament to 30 years of dedicated work by the committee.

In January 2014, Historic Takoma organized a celebration, "Takoma Park, 30 Years Nuclear-Free," honoring the work of the committee. You can view a snapshot of the celebration by watching the January 2014 edition of "Snapshots" on City TV online at <http://bit.ly/1gDZ5Rd>.

Exterior home repairs offered

After two successful years of conducting exterior home repairs, Takoma Park has renewed its commitment to the Exterior Home Repair Program, approving $80,000 in this year's city budget to fund it.

This program is dedicated to improving the homes and lives of low- to moderate-income homeowners. Homeowner eligibility is based on annual household income, which, for example, cannot be higher than $47,950 for a one-person household or $54,800 for a two-person household. Households that have previously participated in exterior home repair programs are not eligible.

Work that would be acceptable for the program includes, but is not limited to, roof, gutter, concrete, siding, wood and storm door repair or replacement, installation of exterior handrails, tree trimming or removal, and painting. The work is conducted by licensed contractors and there is no cost to the homeowner.

If you are considering the program, city staff advises that you do not delay

Damage or wear? What's the difference?

By Moses A. Wilds, Jr.
Landlord-Tenant Mediation Specialist

I am vacating my apartment and as I look around at what I'm leaving behind, I wonder: what is the difference between ordinary wear and tear, and actual damage? I don't want to be charged for damage if the apartment's condition is normal for the amount of time I've lived here.

Lucky for you, the county's Landlord-Tenant Commission has a definition for that: "Ordinary wear and tear means deterioration that occurs without negligence, carelessness or abuse of the premises, equipment, furnishings or appliances." Above is a chart to show you exactly what that means.

But leaving your apartment is not just about damage vs. wear and tear. Tenants are also expected to leave rental properties clean. That means getting busy ...

- Removing surface dirt (grease, grime and dust)

Ordinary Wear and Tear	Damage
Minor marks/nicks on walls	Holes in wall larger than nail size
Faded, cracked or chipped paint	Crayon marks, unapproved paint color, excessive dirt requiring more than one coat to cover
A rug worn thin by ordinary use	Stains and odors in rug caused by pets, spills or leaks
Minor wood floor scuffing	Large gouges/scratches on wood floor
Worn countertop	Burns/cuts in countertop
Slightly dusty blinds	Missing, broken or bent blinds slats

- Cleaning kitchen appliances and bathrooms
- Removing all items from cupboards and closets
- Removing all personal items from the rental property
- Sweeping and vacuuming the rental unit

To make sure your departure goes smoothly, we encourage all tenants to request an exit inspection before they leave. The request should be sent to the landlord by both certified and regular mail, be mailed at least 15 days before the moving date and include the moving date and the tenant's new address. The landlord is required to provide his/her response by certified mail and may schedule the inspection five days before or after the vacate date. Failure by the landlord to respond after the tenant has properly requested the exit inspection will result in the landlord forfeiting the right to withhold any part of the security deposit for damages.

Finally, if the landlord does wind up withholding any portion of the security deposit for damages he/she must tell you why – more specifically, he/she is required to send an itemized list to the tenant within 45 days of the end of the tenancy, listing the actual cost to repair the damage. The list must be sent by first class mail to the last known address of the tenant.

For a copy of the county's What is Ordinary Wear and Tear? brochure, go to: www.montgomerycountymd.gov/DHCA/housing/landlordtenant/index.html.

Fair Return Rent Increase Petition- 6815 Eastern Avenue (2013-9L)

The owner of this five unit apartment building filed a fair return rent increase petition on December 30, 2013, seeking a rent increase above the Rent Stabilization Allowance. Landlords are entitled to a rent increase above the Rent Stabilization Allowance if they can show that their net operating income has been reduced due to escalating operating costs. After review of the required documentation, an increase of $113.89 was approved by COLTA's rents analyst for each of the units.

The tenants had a 30-day period to comment on the decision. No comments were received. The landlord is required to give the tenants a two-month written notification of the fair return rent increase. This fair return rent increase granted by COLTA substitutes for the 1.4 percent rent stabilization increase that the landlord was entitled to take during the current recording period of July 1, 2013 through June 30, 2014.

To review the full decision, please access it on the city's website at www.takomaparkmd.gov, click on "Landlord-Tenant" and scroll down to "COLTA Case Summaries."

THE ARTS

A documentary film and post-screening discussion on June 12 will feature graffiti artists from around the world and around the corner.

Street art, world music, folk on stage this month

Ayreheart blends old and new

Saturday, June 7, 7:30 p.m.

$10 suggested donation

The music of Ayreheart reflects elements of many kinds of music including folk, classical and Celtic. The combination of lute, fretless bass and a variety of percussion instruments blends the old and new to create a unique and timeless sound.

The lute dates back to ancient Greece and was popular throughout Medieval Europe. It was first brought to Europe by the Crusaders and is known in Arabic as al oud. More recently musicians, especially guitar players, have found their way to this historic instrument.

Ayreheart is led by Grammy-nominated lutenist Ronn McFarlane. McFarlane and his bandmates – Will Morris (colascione, fretless bass, violin, mandolin), Brian Kay (vocals, lute, komuz, mandolin) and Mtias Rucht (percussion) – strive to bring the lute – the most popular instrument of the Renaissance – into today's musical mainstream and make it accessible to a wider audience.

Las Calles Hablan - The Streets Speak

Thursday, June 12, 7:30 p.m.

TP Community Center Auditorium

Free

Beginning with a film screening of Las Calles Hablan, which translates to "The Streets Speak," this evening will explore the world of street art. Set in Barcelona, the film documents the vast array of murals and graffiti throughout this Spanish coastal city. While the opinions on graffiti span the gamut from love to hate to indifference, this film explores how street art can spark discussion and community transformation for good.

Following the screening will be a question and answer session with D.C. area graffiti artists 181 and Anieken Udofia. The first, 181, is a self-taught contemporary artist who shows in the traditional gallery setting and also produces large scale murals nationally and internationally. Anieken Udofia was a 2011 lead artist with Murals D.C. and is one of the District's most well-known visual artists. The community may be familiar with his murals of Frederick Douglass in Anacostia, the Duke Ellington building mural, and the George Washington mural on U Street NW.

Sitar virtuoso Jay Kishor's work has been described as "world music on the edge of jazz." His performance in Takoma Park will be improvised on the electric guitar and will draw from elements of Indian raga music as well as classical, jazz and rock.

Kishor is a former visiting artist with the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, a rostered artist for the Kennedy Center, and panel member for the development of the ethnomusicology program at Peabody Conservatory.

Artisans apply for Folk Festival

The 37th annual Takoma Park Folk Festival is accepting applications from artisans who want to participate in the craft show portion of the event, which will be Sept. 7 at the Takoma Park Middle School. Applications are due June 30.

The show is a big attraction at the Folk Festival, which includes seven stages of local and regional musicians, food and community tables as well. This year the festival's theme, community and home town, is reflected in the crafts which, says Gina Gaspin, a fiber artist and 2014 craft show organizer, "have always been part of the folk tradition...They are historically linked to community, when you consider the traditional quilting bees or one-kiln towns."

Craft show participants are selected by a jury of artists, and include everything from weaving to pottery to photography to jewelry in their work. This year artisanal food producers will be considered as well.

Past participants praise the friendly, family-oriented and easily accessible festival and its broad, community-minded audience. "It's the perfect show to create dialogue and develop a clientele through community involvement," says Laureen Summers, a long-time volunteer and craft show organizer.

Counseling program promotes responsibility, community connection among local youth

For people like Isaiah Brown, the Takoma Park Recreation Department is a big part of life in this city. He enrolled in the winter basketball league when he was small, then volunteered as a Counselor in Training (CIT) as a teenager. This summer, Brown is on staff as a recreation aide for summer camp.

The CIT program “was a great experience,” says Brown. “I learned a lot about child development and mentoring. I also learned other job skills I can use in future endeavors, practicing patience and learning to step away from a situation before reacting.” He even learned CPR and first aid.

Brown is just one of many young people who have grown up with the Recreation Department. Hundreds of local kids have attended the before and after school program, joined field trips during vacation days, tried out summer camps and enrolled in activities like flag football, basketball, arts and crafts and Dungeons and Dragons.

Taking the Recreation Department experience a step further, the CIT program has mentored 15 teens over the last few years, offering them real-world lessons in responsibility and safety, the importance of personal connections and the satisfaction of volunteering.

Showing local youth the impact they can have on younger children enrolled in the same programs they attended themselves is not only empowering – it also deepens connection and engagement with the community.

The CIT training involves lessons in interacting with children, job skills like showing up on time and demonstrating reliability and initiative, and practical training in safety, including CPR and first aid. There are still spots available in the last training for this year, which begins June 10. For more information please contact the Recreation Department office at 301-891-7290.

Renowned illustrator Maira Kalman draws Takoma crowd

By Karen MacPherson

It's hard – no, make that impossible – to pigeonhole Maira Kalman's work. She writes and illustrates books for adults like "In Pursuit of Happiness" and "The Principles of Uncertainty." She creates covers for The New Yorker magazine, writes and illustrates blogs for The New York Times, and publishes acclaimed biographies for children describing such American luminaries as Abraham Lincoln and Thomas Jefferson.

Kalman also works specifically as an illustrator, creating the artwork for "Food Rules," the healthy eating bible written by Michael Pollan, as well as the illustrations for "The Elements of Style," the classic writer's manual authored by William Strunk and E.B. White. She's even published an award-winning book for teens,

"Why We Broke Up," which was co-authored by Daniel Handler (a.k.a. Lemony Snicket, the author of "A Series of Unfortunate Events"). The two also just released a new collaboration for teens and adults, "Girls Standing on Lawns."

Currently, Kalman is curating an exhibition of various objects from the collection of the Smithsonian's Cooper-Hewitt Museum in New York; the exhibit is part of a grand re-opening of the museum after a lengthy renovation.

Critics have described Kalman's work as "narrative drawing," a type of journalism in which she both illustrates and writes about the world around her.

"I do see myself as a journalist," Kalman told the crowd of adults and kids who came to hear her at a recent event, co-sponsored by Politics and Prose Bookstore, in the Takoma Park Community Center. "I am an artist at large, going around the world and reporting on what I see.

"Sometimes, it's very pointed, like the books on Lincoln or Jefferson. But sometimes, it's whimsical, like 'The Principles of Uncertainty.' But still, I'm always trying to make a human connection between the experience of being alive and trying to make sense of ... the world."

Kalman, 64, doesn't have a college degree or even any formal art training. But her unique vision of the world has won her millions of fans around the world, who delight in the way her books combine research, thoughtfulness, humor and quirkiness. All of those qualities were on display at her Takoma Park program, which was focused on her non-fiction books for kids: "Fireboat," "Looking at

Summer Quest begins

On Tuesday, June 10 at 7 p.m., the library will unveil its latest Summer Quest summer reading program. All are invited for the kick-off event for Summer Quest 2014, with the artwork and story created, as always, by staff artiste extraordinaire, Dave Burbank.

Takoma Park is the only library in Maryland to offer its own summer reading program, so it's a unique experience! The read-to-play program starts when kids pick a character and give it a name. Then they move their character along the big gameboard in the Children's Room as they read a book for each of the 10 reading challenges.

The reading challenges are open-ended – i.e. "read an adventure book" – as all of the research shows that kids will read more if they can choose their own books. Library staff will have plenty of reading suggestions, however, for those who want them. If participants can't make the June 10 kick-off, they can start Summer Quest any time over the summer. The program will conclude Summer Quest with a party in early September. Thanks to the Friends of the Library for sponsoring Summer Quest.

Caldecott Club Expands

The library's popular Caldecott Club – a family book club – is expanding to go all year round. In this fun program, participants spend an hour reading – via the library's special projector and the big screen – some of the best new picture books for kids. Participants and librarians also talk about whether the books might be contenders for the Caldecott Medal, given annually by the American Library Association to the best-illustrated book for children ages infant through 14. This wide age-range for Caldecott contenders allows the club to read a variety of books, from those that appeal to very young children to those aimed at school-agers.

The next meeting is on Monday, June 30, at 7 p.m. It's a great way for families to have fun while reading and discussing books together, and enjoying some lemonade and cookies.

Book-sale hits a home run

The Friends of the Library enjoyed perfect spring weather at its May 17 book sale, netting $2,500. All proceeds go back to the library in the form of donations for SummerQuest, lanyards for kids' library cards, Spanish and French Circle Time and other programs and services.

The Friends' book sales are sustained entirely through the tireless work of volunteers. Those who worked at the May 17 sale are: Tom Gabriel, Suzanne Morgan, Geoff Burkhart, Shereyn and Jerry Ernst, Walter and Rachel Mulbry, Tim Rahn, Phil Shapiro, Dee and Mel Raff, Katherine Dixon-Peugh, Sam Wolde, Nate and Andy Saindon, Sam McCollin, Pat McMahan, Pam Coffey, Jim Williams, Emily Van Loon, Rebekah Zanditon, Enid Hodes, Kimley Mannix, Dave Burbank, and book sale organizer and spiritual advisor Merrill Leffler.

Celebrating Teachers

By many measures, teachers have the toughest – and the most important – job in America. How do they maintain their passion, energy and enthusiasm for teaching? For many, the spark that stokes their fire for teaching comes from poetry.

In “Teaching With Heart: Poetry That Speaks To The Courage To Teach,” 90 diverse teachers, educators and administrators share the poems that inspire them, along with heartfelt, moving stories about what each poem means to them and how it guides their teaching.

On Wednesday, June 11 from 7:30-9 p.m. at the Takoma Park Community Center Auditorium “Teaching with Heart” editor Megan Scribner and local contributors Liam Corley, Kathleen Glaser, Dennis Huffman, Christine Intagliata and Jamie Raskin will gather for an evening of lively readings, followed by a question and answer session.

“Teaching with Heart” is the highly anticipated sequel to the bestselling “Teaching with Fire” (2003), which was number two on Edudemic’s list of 50 Most Popular Books for Teachers.

“Teaching with Heart” is a book by teachers for teachers. Books will be available for purchase – and for autographs for that special teacher in your life.

Friends Reading Group looks ahead

The Friends of the Library’s next book discussion – scheduled for Wednesday July 16 in the Community Center auditorium at 7:30 p.m. – will examine “Alias Grace” by Margaret Atwood (1996).

This ambitious novel tells the story of “a historical figure, the notorious Grace Marks, a handsome but hapless Irish immigrant who worked as a scullery maid in Toronto in the 1840s,” wrote Francine Prose in a New York Times review. “At the age of 16, she was convicted of abetting the brutal murder of her employer, Thomas Kinnear, and his pregnant housekeeper and paramour, Nancy Montgomery... ‘Alias Grace’ has the physical heft and weighty authority of a 19th century novel...the book evokes the high Victorian mode, spiced with the spooky plot twists and playfully devious teases of the equally high Gothic – the literary styles of the period in which the book is set.”

In the fall, the book club will begin discussions of the next “big book” – “Don Quixote” by Miguel De Cervantes. Here is an enticing excerpt from the acclaimed translation of this classic novel by Edith Grossman: “His fantasy filled with everything he had read in his books, enchantments as well as combats, battles, challenges, wounds, courtings, loves, torments, and other impossible foolishness, and he became so convinced in his imagination of the truth of all the countless grandiloquent and false inventions he read that for him no history in the world was truer.”

To participate in the Friends Reading Group check at the Library for further dates and announcements.

Lincoln” and “Thomas Jefferson: Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Everything.”

In “Fireboat,” Kalman tells the story of the John J. Harvey, a fire boat that was long past its heyday when some New Yorkers bought and restored it in the late 1990s. When terrorists struck on September 11, 2001, the Harvey was instrumental in fighting the fires at the site of the World Trade Center buildings because the water mains there were buried under the rubble.

Kalman said “Fireboat” is “a story of being resilient in a tremendous way.” She added that stories like “Fireboat” are “a way to talk to kids about tragic events.... It says, ‘This is what happened and this is how we deal with it.’”

In “Looking at Lincoln,” Kalman said she tried to give young readers “a sense of his extraordinary presence.... If you study him, there’s no way not to fall in love with Abraham Lincoln.” In fact, Kalman joked, she herself is famous for saying that she’s in love with Lincoln “to the point that I always say that I would have been a better wife than Mary [Todd Lincoln].”

During her talk, Kalman talked about illustrating Lincoln artifacts like his trademark stovepipe hat as a way to make him more alive for young readers who only know him as an important person who lived long ago. Kalman, however, believes that objects like Lincoln’s hat or Jefferson’s jacket, which he lined with socks to make it warmer, can offer readers a “humanizing” connection to

Katherine Rurka told the Old Town Business Association in April. “Twenty years ago, the TPSS Food Coop and its members were the first business that offered Spring Mill Bread Co. the opportunity to tap into an ever-growing market in natural foods.”

Right next door at 7302 Carroll Ave., MAD Fitness – for Mother And Daughter – will feature personal training from Sue Immerman and Eve Kenney. Known around town for their contributions on the softball and Babe Ruth baseball diamonds, this mother-daughter team has turned to a new mission: providing instruction and training through functional exercise. Immerman, the mom, is a personal trainer certified through the National Academy of Sports Medicine, with several specializations; she also has an M.A. in adult development and aging. Kenney, the daughter, is also a certified personal trainer, and is studying kinesiology at the University of Maryland.

The duo will offer small group and semi-private classes in body weight training, flexibility, sport-specific training, partner workouts, pre- and post-natal fitness and more.

The signature element at MAD Fitness is fun – using targeted, themed workshops and a sense of humor. Immerman and Kenney want to turn fitness from being a chore to being a pleasure. They already have followers from the classes they co-teach at Roda Movements.

MAD Fitness will open this summer. See www.madfitness.us for more information.

More new businesses

Other new businesses in town include Emily Jacobs’ myofascial release and massage therapy services, in the studio at 7040 Carroll Ave., above Roscoe’s Pizzeria. Myofascial

Writing about Jefferson was much harder than writing about Lincoln, Kalman noted. Jefferson “is a different guy. I don’t love him, but I admire and respect him tremendously,” Kalman said, adding that Jefferson “doesn’t come across as having a sense of humor like Lincoln.” But Kalman was clearly taken by what she called “the genius of his brain and the breadth of his interests,” which she underlines in the subtitle of her book: “Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Everything.” That’s what makes Jefferson’s refusal to give up his slaves “so heartbreaking,” she added.

Trying to sum up such a significant and complex person like Jefferson for children can be daunting, Kalman said. That’s where the illustrations she does can be so helpful in conveying facts without adding more text.

Asked whether the words or the images come first to her, Kalman said that they mostly come together. Kalman, who emigrated to the United States from Israel when she was a child, said that she fell in love with the English language at a young age, and “so words live for me in their own kind of visual floaty thing.”

“Then, I’m always seeing a lot of things that I know I want to paint. Somehow everything [words and pictures] gets smushed together in this amazing way.”

Note: The Library has a number of Kalman’s books for kids, teens and adults; we also have The New Yorker magazine, to which she is a frequent contributor. Come in and check out Kalman’s work!

bunch of preschoolers. It involves careful study of the art of children’s book making, awareness and responsiveness to the distinctive needs of the children who visit your library, creativity in choosing a broad array of subjects and styles among your book selections, open-mindedness for engaging and dynamic programming – and yes, it helps to know a few good toddler tunes.

MacPherson, who raised two children in Takoma Park, came to the Takoma Park Library after 30 years as a reporter for Scripps Howard News Service. She returned to school for a master’s degree in library science and began working at the Takoma Park library seven years ago. Her optimistic nature shines through in the Vox Populi interview, where she enthusiastically tells the reporter, “I’ve gotten to do the two things I really wanted to do with my life. I’ve gotten to be a newspaper reporter and I got to be a librarian.”

It was not an easy transition, as it took five years to earn the advanced degree required for the job. But, says MacPherson, “I love working with kids. I love finding the right book for the reader. When you do that it’s magical.”

MacPherson also reveals some of her favorite book characters (the librarian in the Beezus and Ramona series), her wish that all parents would take time to read with their children, and the reason Takoma Park’s library is known as an “outlaw.”

AT YOUR SERVICE

THE FIREHOUSE REPORT

By Jim Jarboe

As of April 30, the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department and the personnel of the Montgomery County Fire and Rescue Service assigned to the station have responded to 206 fire-related incidents in 2014. The department addressed or assisted with 899 rescue or ambulance-related incidents for a total of 1,105. Totals for 2013 were 193 and 933 representing a decrease of 21 incidents.

During the month of April 2014, the Takoma Park volunteers put in a total of 1,307.5 hours of standby time at the station, compared to 1,200.5 in April 2013. Grand totals as of April 2014 are 4,925 hours, compared to 4,356 hours in 2013, an increase of 569 hours.

Maryland fire deaths update

The Maryland State Fire Marshal Office reported as of May 27, 2014, 30 people have died in fires, as compared to 38 in 2013. That's a 21 percent drop from last year.

Outside cooking can spell danger

It's that time of the year, for one of the great pleasures of summer is eating and cooking out of doors with family and friends. The popularity of this activity is attested to by the great number of outdoor grills being sold each year. Such grills can be fun to cook on and provide delicious food, but they can also be dangerous. None of them are foolproof, and all should be handled with care.

Grill Safety

- Keep at 20 feet from any structure.
- Use only in a well ventilated area.
- Keep children away from all cooking equipment.
- Keep a fire extinguisher or garden hose nearby.
- Never leave foods cooking unattended.
- Use only approved fire starters.
- After cooking, soak the coals.
- Clean the grill with water and detergent to avoid grease buildup.

It's a fact... cooking on apartment balconies is against the law.

Fireworks are illegal

All fireworks are illegal in Maryland, regardless of where they may have been purchased. Simply by having fireworks in your possession you may face a fine of $1,000 or up to six months in jail. Don't let foolishness cause you to spend the holiday in jail. And don't let carelessness cause you to spend the holiday in the hospital.

Two rules to follow: Don't handle fireworks yourself, and stay away from those who do. Leave the fireworks displays to the pros. Let's have a safe holiday.

Takoma Park Lions Club member Mike Bigler was nominated by his daughter Beth for the prestigious position of 1st Vice District Governor. TPLC Milestone ... In June, Beth will become Takoma Park Lions Club first female President. Congratulations to both!

Keep it tidy.

During the warmer months, maintaining your yard can require a little more work. The city's code states that the height of all grass and weeds must be kept below 12 inches. Vines, shrubbery, hedges and other vegetation must also be maintained. It is also important that vegetation not encroach onto the public sidewalk or extend out over the public sidewalk, including any vegetation overhanging the public sidewalk below 8 feet. Help maintain our community and keep our city beautiful.

Takoma/Langley Crossroads studies expand, anticipate the Purple Line

On March 21, more than 250 regional leaders from nonprofit, government, business, and philanthropy attended “Beyond the Tracks” at the University of Maryland-College Park, to learn from other regions how to fulfill the Purple Line’s promise of improving the environmental, social and economic conditions of communities along the proposed 16-mile light rail corridor. The Takoma/Langley Crossroads, Takoma Park’s largest commercial district, is a future Purple Line stop near the geographic center of the corridor. The conference was organized by the newly-formed Purple Line Corridor Coalition, in the National Center for Smart Growth Research and Education at the University of Maryland. The City of Takoma Park is a member of the coalition, and Housing and Community Development staff and Councilmember Fred Schultz participated in the conference.

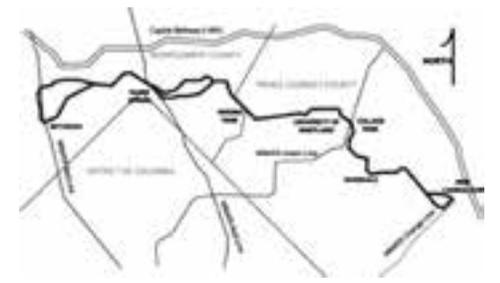

The coalition’s research shows that the best way for communities to reap the benefits of new transit while protecting their interests is to coordinate their efforts corridor-wide. The intent of the conference is to move from the engineering and planning for the Purple Line, led by the Maryland Transit Administration, to a more regional planning approach that addresses the community, economic and environmental impacts and opportunities of the project. Leaders from state and local governments, educational and nonprofit institutions, and members of the business and development sector discussed topics including housing along the Purple Line corridor, workforce development, supporting local businesses and building community through design and development.

The coalition has produced dozens of maps showing a range of economic, demographic and transportation scenarios that will possibly develop when the Purple Line is implemented. Visit the coalition’s website to learn more about its research and objectives: <http://smartgrowth.umd.edu/plcc.html>

Meanwhile, a panel of real estate, housing and development professionals from the Urban Land Institute (ULI) chose the Takoma/Langley Crossroads for a two-month project providing expertise on how communities can achieve local planning goals while also making the greatest regional contribution toward sustainable and equitable development. In particular, the panel was tasked with providing the city guidance to help existing businesses survive tumultuous construction and redevelopment, as well as encourage existing and future independent businesses to prosper and flourish after the area is redeveloped as a more pedestrian-friendly area.

At the May 12 City Council meeting, the panel provided recommendations to encourage and foster a thoughtful, incremental approach to redevelopment of the Takoma/Langley Crossroads’ commercial centers that builds on existing strengths of the district in light of anticipated redevelopment and transit investments like the Purple Line. The presentation can be streamed with the May 12 City Council meeting online, and is also available for download at www.theNewAve.com.

The Purple Line light rail crosses the region.

School lunch trays go green

After several years of advocacy, led in large part by the Piney Branch Elementary School-based Young Activists Club, local environmentalists are celebrating the Montgomery County School Board’s vote to ban polystyrene (styrofoam) lunch trays from county schools. Instead, students will use more environmentally friendly cardboard trays.

YAC has been fighting for a switch away from polystyrene since 2010, and raised $10,000 to purchase a dishwasher, intending to replace polystyrene with reusable trays. The school board denied that request, reasoning that purchasing dishwashers county-wide would be too costly. Students say they will continue to pursue the dishwasher option.

The change to cardboard has already taken affect at several schools in Montgomery and officials expect the program to be county-wide in the fall.

Free copies of the new Takoma Park Bike Map are available at the Community Center, the Recreation Center on New Hampshire Avenue, at local bike shops and at www.takomaparkmd.gov/hcd/transportation-planning.

Lifelong Takoma Park launches

A new Lifelong Initiative will kick off at a Meet and Greet meeting on Tuesday, June 10 at 10:30 a.m. at the Community Center Senior Room. Residents ages 55 and older are invited to come hear program director Karen Maricheau describe the initiative, which is designed to connect them to the services they need. Refreshments, socializing and door prizes will fill out the event. For more information, contact Maricheau at 301-891-7232 or kmaricheau@takomaparkmd.gov.

Campaign signs restricted

With the June 24 primaries approaching, residents are reminded that campaign signs are allowed on private property but will be removed from public rights of way, generally the grassy area between the sidewalk and the street. Takoma Park follows Montgomery County sign ordinances, which also limit size and location. With some variations, signs may be no larger than 10 square feet, no higher than 5 feet and no closer than 5 feet from the property line. The ordinance is available at <http://bit.ly/1pAMTkq>.

Tree Walk explores urban canopy

Takoma Park’s Tree Commission is leading a Tree Tour through Ward 1 on Saturday, July 12 from 10:30 a.m.-noon, exploring the health of the urban tree canopy and what residents can do to help sustain it. Light refreshments will be served at the end of the circular route, which will begin and end at the small, triangular park at Baltimore and Albany avenues. Children are welcome, as are residents from other wards. For more information, contact treecommission@takomaparkmd.gov.

Hazardous Waste Drop-Off

The Department of Public Works will hold its first Household Hazardous Waste Drop-Off, June 14 from 10 a.m. – 2 p.m. at the Public Works yard, 31 Oswego Ave. Among the items that will be accepted: aerosol cans, antifreeze and hydraulic fluids (5 gallon limit), batteries, brake fluid, gasoline, gas-oil mixes, herbicides, insecticides and pesticides, fluorescent light tubes and ballasts, thermostats and thermometers containing mercury, oil based paints, paint thinners and solvents and photographic chemicals. For a full list, see www.takomaparkmd.gov/publicworks/household-hazardous-waste-drop-off-day.

BUDGET

■ From page 1

- Additional $6,000 to support summer camps for youth at Washington Adventist University
- Additional $5,000 for a grant to the Piney Branch Pool
- Additional $5,000 to study the possibility of connecting Orchard Alley and Sheridan Street

Other changes include transfers from the Special Revenue Fund to provide $5,000 more for a Program Open Space grant supporting the dog park.

Where the money goes

The largest expenditure in the city budget is for personnel, as it is every year; when parsed out from the rest of the budget, personnel costs account for about 65 percent of the city’s spending. Costs such as salaries, health care and workers’ compensation are expected to rise by 3 percent.

Other big-ticket items this year include:

- $840,000 for the Equipment Replacement Fund
- $270,000 for sustainability initiatives
- $200,000 for financial software
- $176,000 for police cars

Additionally, about $254,000 in funds obtained from federal programs will be applied to the Ethan Allen Gateway Streetscape project, which will bring fresh landscaping, bike lanes, benches and other pedestrian/biker-friendly enhancements to the corner of New Hampshire Avenue and Ethan Allen Avenue/Rte. 410.

Quality of life: dogs, recreation and more

One budget item attracted the most attention at the public hearing podium: the proposed dog park, a first for Takoma Park. Initially budgeted at $50,000, after testimony from several residents, including representatives of the advocacy group Takoma Dogs, the amount was increased to $70,000. Three quarters of that will come from Program Open Space, the rest in matching funds from the city. The funds will cover initial study and possible construction of a facility at an as-yet-undecided location, and a study to explore the possibility of creating additional, smaller parks at various locations throughout the city. After a public hearing and City Council work session June 2, council has indicated approval for a pilot at Heffner Park.

Other quality of life expenditures include

- $85,000 for a study to consider facility improvements at the police station
- $50,000 to study facility improvements at the library
- $45,000 for a study of development opportunities around the New Hampshire Avenue Recreation Center
- $30,000 to support the Takoma Langley Crossroads Development Authority, which supports businesses in the commercial district at New Hampshire and University avenues

- $10,000 for a pilot program that would provide summer jobs to Takoma Park youth
- $10,000 to support a 125th anniversary celebration of Takoma Park’s incorporation as a town
- $20,000 for a mentoring/coaching/college prep program for high school students; and funding for various city festivals, including the Folk Festival, Celebrate Takoma and the Independence Day parade and fireworks

The final budget will be posted online later this year. For a copy of the proposed budget, go to www.takomaparkmd.gov/finance/budget. Council meetings and work sessions are also available for review at www.takomaparkmd.gov/citycouncil/meetings.

Public Hearing on Metro Property June 18

A public hearing regarding Washington Metro Area Transit Authority (WMATA) plans to build a mid-rise apartment building at Takoma Metro will be held Wednesday, June 18, at the Takoma Education Campus (7010 Piney Branch Road). An information session will begin at 4:30 p.m.; the public hearing will run from 5-10 p.m. To register to speak, submit your name and organizational affiliation, if any, to speak@mwata.com.

While the city does not have any decision-making power in WMATA's development, the transit authority works closely with local jurisdictions in implementing any changes. With that in mind, the Takoma Park City Council passed a resolution regarding the development, urging WMATA to address such concerns as building height and setback, retaining green space, preserving sufficient parking for Metro users, providing appropriate parking for mass-transit-oriented housing built on the site, safety for people with disabilities and other issues. The city's concerns may be found at <http://bit.ly/1kWWr91>. The proposed development can be viewed on WMATA's website at <http://bit.ly/1hmxjJO>.
