Morris dancers entertain the festival crowd.

Feast your eyes on this festival

The 38th annual Takoma Park Folk Festival was a feast for the senses. Upon arriving on convenient shuttles from Takoma metro station or the Montgomery College, festival goers were immediately surrounded by the aromas of the various cuisines available for tasting.

Some opted for refreshing all-natural smoothies or fresh-squeezed lemonade. Others enjoyed a full meal of teriyaki chicken kebabs with a side of lo mein, or perhaps, they chose the vegetarian African fare provided by Suya To Go. For dessert, the choices included funnel cake, Ben & Jerry's ice cream, and Italian custard shakes.

After enjoying their meals and community conversation in one of the designated outdoor eating areas, festival goers may have ventured inside to hear the lively music performances of the Aloha Boys or the Devil's Tailors. While en route they couldn't miss the energetic movement of the DC Morris Dancers as they entertained the crowd gathering near the entrance to Piney Branch Middle School.

If you were wondering what to do next, helpful volunteers were nearby to offer suggestions or directions to your next destination. In the vendor area, the eye-catching clothing, jewelry, and other crafts required closer inspection. Unique scents like citrus winter and orange lavender oatmeal drew attendees to Aburi Botanicals where soaps, oils, and other products were on display.

Tie Die Maker Steven Homberg made the trip from North Carolina to attend his fourth Takoma Park Folk Festival. He boasted that his clothing was softer to

City Council considers advisory question for November ballot

According to City Clerk Jessie Carpenter, it's been a decade since an advisory question appeared on the Takoma Park election ballot. That could change. At its Sept. 28 meeting, the Council is expected to vote to approve placing Councilmember Tim Male's advisory question on the ballot for the Nov. 3 election.

Male has proposed placing an advisory question on the ballot to change City elections to coincide with the presidential and Maryland gubernatorial elections. He has advocated for this change as a means to increase voter turnout and broaden the racial and ethnic diversity of voters. "There is good evidence of higher turnout and lower costs," Male said. In addition, "cities that have synced up their local elections with state and federal elections have found that it had a big influence on the demographics of who votes," he continued, "and it's easier for everybody."

"There's been a movement during the past six years to encourage people to vote,"

It takes a village to make a mural

By Bob Guldin

Something there is that doesn't love a wall – at least if that wall is big and boring and faces a busy neighborhood commercial street. That's why a wide brick supermarket wall in the Takoma/Langley Crossroads will soon be decorated with a lively mural – to be created in part by people from the neighborhood.

The mural will be on Holton Lane near New Hampshire Ave., on the side of an ALDI supermarket, facing the Langley Park Post Office. The project is getting support from the City of Takoma Park and the Takoma/Langley Crossroads Development Authority (CDA) with the collaboration of local residents and the Krsko Creative Group.

The public art project is supported by the City's Community Grants Program, and this will be the first public art in the Takoma/Langley commercial district in decades. The cost of the mural is expected to be $20,000; the City and the CDA will split the cost.

Melanie Isis, the director of the Takoma/Langley CDA, says "the mural will be a transformation" of the immediate environment. According to Isis, the lead artists, Peter Krsko and Alicia Cosnahan, "have done an enormous number of community murals," including those on local restaurants El Golfo and El Gavilán.

The artists are inviting local residents and business owners to become part of mural-making and engage in all steps of the creative process, which will include development of preliminary sketches, art workshops and wall painting.

Community participation timeline

The CDA and the lead artists have planned a series of community workshops and painting sessions. The first was held Sept. 28, to present the mural theme and get feedback on the sketch. Meetings will be at 1335 Holton Lane. Upcoming mural events are:

Oct. 15, 6-8 p.m. Community meeting to introduce the final mural sketch based on previous feedback

Oct. 16, 4-8 p.m. First community work session to prime the wall

Oct. 17, 10 a.m.–noon Community art workshop

BUILDING COMMUNITY

Yard hoarders

As you go about your day, you might notice clutter in someone's yard. It may be piled up on the porch, next to the shed, or in the driveway. Not only are these piles of rubbish a code violation, but they may also be a sign of hoarding. Hoarding is the acquisition of, and failure to discard, a large number of possessions. If these possessions are outside of a home, they can block exits or entrances and could possibly lead to a rodent or insect infestation. Untagged or inoperable vehicles in the yard or the driveway could also point to hoarding. If you see a neighbor who might be a hoarder, offer to give them a hand. If they need more serious help, Montgomery County Health and Human Services (240-777-0311) can work with them to address their hoarding.

ADVISORY QUESTION

observed City Manager Suzanne L. Ludlow. "We have early voting, and you don't have to have a reason to vote absentee."

"We are trying to make it as easy as possible," Carpenter said of the many options local residents have for voting in city elections.

While these measures were designed to increase voter turnout, some in Takoma Park remember a time when voting in the City was very much a community affair. "People liked the positive feeling of a small community coming together in one place on Election Day," Ludlow said.

She acknowledges that this new proposal to combine city elections with federal and state elections moves even further away from the community feel of the electoral process: "People would be dispersed in multiple places, and candidates would have to cover multiple polling places."

However, changing the timeline for City elections is far from a done deal. If the advisory question does appear on the ballot, it will serve as means for merely gauging how local residents feel about the proposed change. "It's an advisory question only," Carpenter emphasized. "The Council would make the final decision to change the charter."

Consideration of the question should make for healthy debate in the community and will likely be a topic of discussion at the upcoming Election Forum on Oct. 21.

Energy challenge update

The Neighborhood Energy Challenge (NEC) is in full swing with only slightly more than a year left of the competition. As of September, 634 Takoma Park residents have signed up for the challenge. Of those signed up, 13 participants have completed their Green Home Certification, with 1 person achieving the toughest Dark Green Certification, with two more applicants in the verification stage. The Medium Green Certification is the next most difficult certification, yet 4 residents have still managed to achieve it. The Light Green Certification is the easiest, and 8 residents have met its qualifications.

Although many have signed up, the points in the competition come from achieving the different certifications. Therefore Team Forest Park leads the way in the Neighborhood Energy Challenge even though Team Sligo-Longbranch has the most residents signed up.

There is a $2,000 grand prize for the neighborhood and a separate $2,000 prize for the multifamily building (12 units or more) that has the most Green Certified Homes. The City's residential and municipal reductions in energy use contribute to Takoma Park's competition for the $5 Million Dollar Georgetown University Energy Prize.

Currently, Takoma Park is ranked #43 out of 50 for the $5 million Georgetown Prize. We have a lot of ground to make up, but we know we can do it! Keep working towards your Green Home Certifications!

Total Energy Consumption (kBtu)

Data on total kBtu (energy use metric) for combined municipal and residential energy use as calculated by Georgetown University Energy Prize committee. Note: the above data has been normalized for weather for the competition.

If you are interested in participating or have questions, please contact Gina Mathias at ginam@takomaparkmd.gov or call 301-891-7623. More information is available at <http://takomaparkmd.gov/sustainability/neighborhood-energy-challenge>.

Small business kilowatt smackdown!

With the support of the City of Takoma Park, the Green Impact Campaign (GIC) and Nextility, two DC-based energy organizations, are coordinating a community initiative to help Takoma Park small businesses save money on energy while reducing their environmental impact.

The effort — Kilowatt Smackdown — will include a community-wide competition between student groups from local universities and colleges to complete free energy assessments for businesses from Oct. 3 to Nov. 18. The outcome will be custom, actionable plans to save money and energy for each business.

During the remainder of the year, Kilowatt Smackdown partners will help small businesses with resources to complete these low- to no-cost recommendations, aid businesses in choosing a lower-cost, green energy supplier, and determine if their buildings are suitable for free solar energy systems. Businesses will also be connected to state and local rebate programs and to the Montgomery County

Green Business Certification program for further assistance and help for deeper energy savings.

Green Impact Campaign and Nextility will train students to conduct energy assessments using their various assessment tools.

Student prizes

The top three students that complete the most energy assessments during the competition period will be awarded the following scholarships from the City of Takoma Park:

1st place — $3,000

2nd place — $1,500

3rd place — $500

Top performing students will be given the opportunity for an informational interview or paid internship at the following organizations:

In "Join Hands: the Life and Art of Matt Sesow," a documentary by Leslye Abbey, artist Matt Sesow explains the childhood accident that resulted in the amputation of his left hand and how he became a mainstay in the D.C. local art scene. An audience Q&A will follow the screening.

Brewing Up History in Washington, D.C.

Thursday, Oct. 1, 7:30 – 9 p.m.

The Takoma Park Community Center auditorium

7500 Maple Ave.

While breweries, such as DC Brau, Union Craft Brewing, and Lost Rhino, keep beer relevant in D.C. today, beer historians Peter Jones and Michael Stein recapture bygone recipes of pre-prohibition brew.

Jones and Stein, an archivist and beer historian for DC Brau, respectively, will discuss D.C. beer history and more in their lecture "Brewing Up History in Washington D.C."

"Local craft beer and brewing has surged dramatically in the past five years, with more than a dozen breweries and brewpubs opening in the DMV," Jones said, "but Brewing has a long and important history for D.C."

They will examine how industrial developments and the first wave of beer-loving German immigrants impacted D.C.'s history.

After living in Japan, Mark H. Rooney brought home more than an airport souvenir. He found a new passion in Japanese drumming.

In #randomactsoftaiko, Rooney and his collaborators meld dance, multimedia art, and taiko drumming in a show that explores the harmony and dissonance of rhythm and movement.

For Rooney, taiko has become a life's work, and it influences his professional and artistic pursuits – from helping found Wesleyan University's taiko program to collaborating with artists, such as Tiger Okoshi, Opera unMet, and UpRooted Dance. #randomactsoftaiko will begin with an interactive demonstration and end with a Q&A.

Winter Basketball League: Father Knows Best

For the past seven years, local resident Eric Butler has volunteered his time as a coach in the Recreation Department's Winter Basketball League. Butler admits that early in his career, as a brand new coach, his biggest fear was "failing to teach the kids anything valuable." During his first few years as a coach, he focused his attention on building life lessons that could be used on and off the court, such as teamwork and perseverance.

Coach Butler's job on the court is very unique, as he is a parent-coach since his daughter Jade is also a member of his team. The two of them have built an inseparable bond, and he has passed his passion and love of basketball down to her. Butler says, "The league gives us the opportunity to spend time away from home together."

Every season Coach Butler is amazed to see how fast the kids on his team grow and develop their skills. When asked about any advice he gives to brand new coaches, Butler suggests they "focus more on player development and less on winning," which can be accomplished by "picking 2 – 3 skills to work on in practice" and building on that foundation weekly. For Butler and Jade, the Winter Basketball League gives them something to look forward to each year.

Registration for the 2016 Winter Basketball League has already begun and the Recreation Department encourages anyone interested in participating to visit www.takomaparkmd.gov/recreation to register. For more information or to volunteer as a coach, please contact Lew McAllister at lewmc@takomaparkmd.gov.

Summer Quest success

We've tallied the final figures, and we had another successful Summer Quest summer reading program, thanks to readers ranging in age from one to 54. Overall, 115 readers read at least one book, but many readers read more. Summer Quest participants read more than 1,100 books as they made their way through the 10 reading challenges. Our top reader was Esme Chang-Gillespie, a pre-schooler who read 106 books with her parents and baby brother. Ten-year-old Kiera Norris was a very close second, reading 101 books; Kiera also completed all the extra reading Summer Quest challenges.

While Summer Quest 2015 is over, we're gearing up for our third annual Winter Quest reading program. Watch for more details soon about Winter Quest, which is designed to keep kids reading over the December holidays.

Halloween events

Halloween fans are in for a real treat this year, as we have a trio of events designed to celebrate the season. First up is a program featuring award-winning kids' novelist Mary Downing Hahn, who specializes in writing spine-tingling tales for young readers. Hahn, a Maryland resident who has sold more than two million copies of her books, will be here on Monday, Oct. 19 at 7:30 p.m. to talk about her newest book, "Took." School Library Journal says of "Took" that "horror fans and readers looking for a good scare will enjoy this creepy tale," while The Horn Book noted that "this creepy tale skillfully weaves in —and honors — the oral tradition of folklore, legends, and ghost stories." Politics & Prose Bookstore will be selling copies of Hahn's books at the event, but the program is free, and no purchase is required to attend.

Next, on Sunday, Oct. 25, from 2-3 p.m., kids are invited to come and make some Halloween crafts. All materials are provided, courtesy of the Friends of the Takoma Park Maryland Library. Kids just need to bring their creativity!

Finally, on Monday, Oct. 26, veteran storyteller Candace Wolf returns with her annual "Scary Stories" program. Wolf, a local resident who has done storytelling all over the world, will offer two sets of tales. From 7-7:45 p.m., she'll tell stories that are just a bit scary and perfect for ages 5-7. From 7:50-8:50 p.m., she'll ratchet up the scary quotient with tales for kids ages 8-13. No registration necessary; just come and enjoy some scary fun!

Authors, authors!

Mary Downing Hahn

co-sponsored by Politics & Prose Bookstore. All events will take place in the Library's Children's Room, unless otherwise noted. Politics & Prose will sell books at each event, but the programs are free and no purchase is required to attend.

Village Rides can give you a lift

By Trey Johanson

Editor's Note:

For people who need a ride, whether temporarily or on a regularly basis, Takoma Park's Village Rides program can be a lifesaver. The program pairs volunteer drivers (who have been trained and screened) with residents who need a lift. Here is one example, compiled by Trey Johanson, who helps administer the program through the Jewish Council for the Aging.

"Let me tell you the background," began Jackie Davison of Victory Towers in Takoma Park. "Now, I am a very good driver, but I totaled my own car in January. I have always been independent, so it was a trauma to have to be dependent on somebody else."

Davison, like so many of our elders, is a confident, capable, active contributor to her community. She is the president of the Victory Tower Tenant Association. She is not a woman used to relying on others. But, when she had a doctor's appointment, she needed a ride to Bethesda. She had recently attended a presentation by the Village of Takoma Park in which she learned about its volunteer driver services. So, she made the call.

At first, she was concerned. "Do they know how to drive? Will they be prompt?" She was concerned about the safety and dependability of the drivers. She was also concerned about the process. "Sometimes you call for volunteer services, and you can tell they're not really together," she said. "I was impressed by the professional approach. The intake was very thorough. And, lo and behold, the driver was prompt and friendly!"

Davison chuckled, "I called again another time, and I slept through my alarm! Sandy [Egan, the driver] called me and said, 'I'm here, where are you?' I had to apologize for that one!"

"I find Sandy just very interesting. We have good conversations and she's just good company. And she's a very, very good driver!"

When asked why more of her neighbors might not ask for help when they need rides, Davison could only guess. "It takes people a while to try something new," she said. "I find in general the people here are just reluctant to take advantage of new opportunities, and I don't understand that, to tell you the truth."

"About a third of our residents are non-English speaking," continued Davison. "Our bulletin board is all in English. We are only reaching out to two thirds of the people who live here! And, non-English speaking residents are increasing, just like in the overall population."

Davison's message seems clear. If our communities are to serve our elders, we must reach out to them respectfully, steadfastly and responsibly. We must communicate in their language, and from their cultural viewpoint. We must be a consistent, reliable presence in their neighborhoods. And, we must be worthy of the trust they place in us, when they do ask for our help.

the touch than most. Perhaps, his shirts, skirts, and dresses were as soft as the array of quilted eyeglass cases, cosmetic bags, and satchels available from I Sew Totes. In the booth across the way was Designs by Salone Starr showcasing African fashions and accessories inspired by the designer's homeland of Sierra Leone.

For those a little winded from shopping, there was more food available for snacking. Perhaps, they stopped at Dances with Loaves for a cherry almond scone, or they visited Cheryl's Kitchen where a 30-year Takoma Park Resident featured her maple frosted walnuts, pecans and cashews at the festival for the first time.

After shopping and dining, festival goers could learn more about their community by visiting the tables of the many civic organizations represented at the event. Among them were the Village of Takoma Park, which provides transportation to senior residents through Village Rides (see p. 9), We Are Takoma, EducationFirst, OurSpace Acupuncture and Montgomery Blair High School. And if you hadn't registered to vote, City Clerk Jessie Carpenter and a member of the board of elections were on hand at the Vote Takoma booth to help you complete the necessary forms in time for the upcoming election on Nov. 3 (see p. 3).

There was so much to enjoy, and everywhere you looked families, friends, volunteers, and performers were doing just that. If you attended this year's Takoma Park Folk Festival, you got an eyeful, an earful and a mouthful of the very best that the City has to offer.

Drink up

Takoma Park has new water bottle filling stations at the Community Center and at Public Works. What a great way to save energy! You don't have to buy bottled water (so you save money and you save energy by avoiding the manufacture of yet more plastic bottles). You get filtered water. And you get it in a convenient spout made just for refilling bottles – or you can slurp right from the old-school water fountain spigot. Plus, the filling stations have a digital display that keeps count of how much waste you've avoided by not using plastic bottles.

Dance Exchange artists, musicians, and community members participate in "New Hampshire Ave: This Is a Place To..."

An evening of music, dance, art and storytelling

By Amanda Stevens

You might have noticed a few things out of the ordinary along New Hampshire Avenue on the evening of July 18. You might have heard the melodies and rhythms of violins, trumpets and drums. You may have spotted new artwork. You might have even seen people you know dancing together in celebration of what New Hampshire Ave is, was, and could be.

Created by Dance Exchange and sponsored by the City of Takoma Park, this performance and community celebration was the culmination of a multi-year project known as "New Hampshire Ave: This Is a Place To..." With major support from the National Endowment for the Arts and ArtPlace America, the project provided an opportunity for people to gather and reflect on the ways they shape what the place is today and what it will be tomorrow.

During July's place-based performance, audience members accompanied performers on a journey of storytelling between Hampshire Tower, Takoma Overlook and the Recreation Center field. As they shared their stories of New Hampshire Ave, Dance Exchange transformed them into movement, weaving them together with Dance Exchange Founder Liz Lerman's landmark work "Still Crossing," to create an intergenerational performance by Dance Exchange artists and New Hampshire Avenue community members. Local musician David Schulman also joined the performance along with trumpeter Don Tillery and Taiko drummer Mark H. Rooney.

For almost two years, Dance Exchange has collaborated with the City of Takoma Park's Housing and Community Development Department to use art and dialogue to create meaningful relationships between the people and places that shape New Hampshire Avenue. Led by Artistic Director Cassie Meador, this work "brings a range of people into conversation about their contributions and hopes for the Avenue." The impact of doing so, Meador explains, "is already apparent, and the connections the project created, we hope, will live on after it ends."

One way the project lives on is through the work of several local artists with whom Dance Exchange collaborated. Installation artist Nicole Salimbene, painter Fetunwork Amedie, photographer Ben Carver and multi-disciplinary artist Nguyen K. Nguyen captured the Avenue in a series of photo portraits, paintings and illustrations, which were installed in the Recreation Center field during July's performance. During the next month, this artwork will appear on banners in public spaces throughout Takoma Park.

Make a Difference - Plant a Tree

Discount Trees Available to Beautify Yards, Replace the Canopy

The season is right to plant trees, and in Takoma Park that means residents can help replenish the aging tree canopy in the city. The city offers added incentive by reducing the cost of the first tree purchased by $100 (unless it is a replacement tree required as part of a Tree Removal Permit). That means residents can add a $195 tree to their yards for just $95 plus 6 percent sales tax, a total of $100.70. Add a second tree and the bill is still only $307.40, planted and guaranteed for one year. Established discounts still apply as well, through the city's annual bulk buy tree sale. As a purchasing agent with Arbor Landscapers, the city is making five species available at wholesale prices. Red oak, sycamore, sweet gum, black gum and American linden—all native shade trees that usually retail for about $350—are available to residents at $195, installed. Sale dates run through Oct. 17.

ORDER FORM

Please include check, including tax, written to the City of Takoma Park and be sure to draw a map of the property and locations for installation. Submit to Todd Bolton, Takoma Park Department of Public Works, 31 Oswego Ave., Silver Spring, Md., 20910 by close of business Oct. 17.

Someone will be in touch regarding installation dates, which will occur in November.
