The Takoma Park Recreation Center where the newly formed friends group held its first meeting last month

That's what friends are for

By Rick Henry

Upon visiting the Takoma Park Recreation Center on New Hampshire Avenue a couple of years ago, Priscilla Labovitz decided to exercise more than her body; she decided to exercise her organizing abilities.

"I saw it (the Center) for the first time when I went to take a Pilates class there, and I couldn't believe how poor the facilities were, especially compared to the Community Center (on Maple Avenue)," she said. "I thought this inequity needed fixing, so I decided to do something."

She joined the City's Recreation Committee and researched information about the center and its administration. But the main result of Labovitz's effort was the formulation of the Friends of the Takoma Park Recreation Center, a group dedicated to improving, advocating and developing programming for the center. The group held its initial meeting on Oct. 5, and Labovitz said approximately 25 people attended, including numerous youths from the community around the Rec Center, who came with enthusiasm and ideas for the facility.

"I was thrilled at the turnout and enthusiasm and the many ideas that members of the community had," Labovitz said. "They have clearly been thinking about this and are ready to move."

Parking in Takoma Park: Studying spaces

By Helen Lyons

Takoma Park is doing a comprehensive review of all of its parking practices in response to new development and changes in some of the parking pressures, as well as management in the City, says Erkin Ozberk, the City's senior planner for Housing and Community Development.

"We're taking a look at everything we do, and we're trying to bring it up to speed and be more proactive," Ozberk explained.

The study covers parking issues, including meters, handicap parking, residential parking permit (RPP) zones, commercial vehicle parking, parking "hot spots," enforcement and City Code and regulations.

Many of the pressures are particularly felt in Ward 1, where recent development in the Old Town area of Takoma Park is one factor that has contributed to increased traffic and demand for parking. "There are parking challenges in Montgomery College, Takoma Park Elementary School and at times around the Presbyterian church on Tulip Avenue," said Council-

The City finally has the MNCPPC permit necessary for dog park construction, and construction began Oct. 20. Construction is expected to take six to ten weeks, and a grand opening date will be set soon.

Parkmobile is now available in Takoma Park

Residents and visitors may now pay for parking at Takoma Park parking meters using their mobile phones for a $.45 transaction fee. To use the new Parkmobile system, customers register free through the app or online at www.parkmobile.com. Once registered, they can use the mobile app, the internet, or call the toll-free number listed on the green meter stickers to pay for parking. Residents are encouraged to download that app and begin using the City's newest tool. For more information about City parking regulations, please visit takomaparkmd.gov/government/police/parking-information.

Residents appointed to Noise Control Board

VACANCIES ON CITY BOARDS, COMMISSIONS AND COMMITTEES

Interested in serving? A great first step is to review information at: www.takomaparkmd.gov/government/boards-commissions-and-committees. Then, attend a meeting to see if it is a good fit for you. If you have questions, contact the committee, or talk to your City Councilmember or the City Clerk. The following groups have vacancies as of Oct. 17, 2016:

The Arts and Humanities Commission advises the City Council on ways in which the City might best serve the public with regard to matters involving the arts; encourages and aids the appreciation and awareness of, and participation in, the arts among all Takoma Park residents; encourages cooperation and coordination among individuals, organizations and institutions concerned with the arts in Takoma Park; and facilitates employment opportunities for artists and the development of self-sustaining arts programs. # City would welcome aquatics center

In a joint letter to Montgomery County Executive Isiah Leggett dated Oct. 25, Takoma Park Mayor Kate Stewart (on behalf of the City Council) and Erik Wangsness, president, Adventist Healthcare/Washington Adventist Hospital, conveyed their support for the construction of a Montgomery County Department of Recreation aquatics center on the Takoma Park campus of Washington Adventist Hospital. Their letter noted that “an aquatics center would be an asset to both the hospital and the community.”

It went on to make the case for locating the aquatics center in Takoma Park by highlighting several key fiscal and social issues. Here are some of the main points that were outlined:

- Small, standalone swimming pools are expensive to operate and do not meet the needs of a large, diverse population. In contrast, aquatics facilities have pools for several uses, including meeting therapeutic needs, recreational needs, exercise needs and providing space for competitive swimming.
- As Washington Adventist Hospital prepares to move its main hospital to White Oak, the City of Takoma Park and hospital leaders are looking at the current site for uses that complement the health services that will remain and, also importantly, improve the overall health

- An aquatics center in Takoma Park, on the edge of East Silver Spring, would provide an enormous community service. According to the Centers for Disease Control (CDC), African-American children between the ages 5 and 14 are three times more likely to drown than white children. One of the factors the CDC points to for this disparity is the lack of access to swimming pools. For the young people who live in the Takoma Park/East Silver Spring community, especially young children of color and low-income residents, having a place close to where they live to learn water safety helps our community address these disparities and provides important life skills to our young people.

The letter concluded by stating that “The City and the Hospital wish to work with the Department of Recreation on evaluating the space needs for the aquatics facility, as well as determining the likely costs of development.” It also indicated that the two organizations want to request a General Assembly bond bill for the project and asked for the support of Leggett and the County Council. Both Dr. Weymouth Spence, president of Washington Adventist University, and Dr. Brad Stewart, vice-president and provost of Montgomery College, support this effort.

FRIENDS

Those who attended the meeting are not the only ones who have been thinking about the Rec Center. Gregory Clark, director of recreation for the City, said that the New Hampshire Avenue facility is an important issue.

He said the City has completed two recreation studies in the past year, one to determine what type of programming and amenities residents would like to see for the facility and the other to determine the feasibility of acquiring the property, which is owned by the Maryland National Capital Parks and Planning Commission (MNCPPC), or building a new facility on other existing property owned by the city.

According to Clark, MNCPPC owns the facility and leases it to Montgomery County, which then tasks the City with providing programming. “The first thing the City needs to do is to figure out whether to acquire the property,” he said. “If we don’t do that, there are limitations to what we can do because we don’t own the building,” Clark said.

Clark said that the results of the survey findings and a discussion about future steps for recreation in the City are on the agenda for the next City Council meeting on Wednesday, Nov. 16, which will be held at the Recreation Center. No matter what the council decides, Clark says he welcomes the opportunity to work with the Friends.

“We (the City) have a lot of desire to improve that facility and better serve the residents, especially in that ward, and working with the Friends and the Recreation Committee will only improve whatever situation we have,” he said.

Takoma Park Recreation Supervisor Vince Cain, who is in charge of the facility, agrees. Cain attended the initial Friends meeting on Oct. 5 and came away impressed and energized. Given that the facility serves a lot of youth from the immediate area, he was especially pleased so many attended the event and provided input. “There were a lot of good ideas, especially from the kids in the community, focusing on new programming,” he said.

He said believes the work of the Friends and other recreation advocates will allow the New Hampshire Center to build on the programs that are already in place and “enhance the fitness and wellness of the residents of Takoma Park.”

PARKING

member Peter Kovar (Ward 1). “In Ward 1, just about every street and every block has a different parking issue of some concern, and it’s quite local in that sense, so we’re going to have to find a policy that works for the city but is also sensitive to the specific concerns that arise in these areas.”

Kovar is already seeking solutions across the DC boundary and hopes that the parking study will help in his efforts. “I’ve reached out to the city council member from Ward 4 of the District of Columbia,” Kovar said, “to talk about whether there are ways, through more collaboration between Takoma Park and the district, that we could get a better common approach to parking in Old Town.”

Laura Barclay, the executive director of the Old Takoma Business Association, said that people were concerned that maximum capacity was being reached in the commercial district, but that “based on studies during peak and nonpeak times, it’s been shown that there are definitely still spaces available.”

“That doesn’t minimize the fact that there are indeed pressure spots or areas that still have parking challenges, where parking isn’t readily available or easily noticeable,” Barclay added.

Her ideas for solutions include additional cross-jurisdictional signage and efforts online on behalf of businesses and the City to include more information about available parking on their websites. “We’ve been thinking about this for a long time,” Barclay said, “so it was good to see the study and get it all official.”

The study builds on survey results, community input and grant-funded research and mapping.

Residents completing the survey can check off which items being considered for review in the study they consider a priority, such as “supporting opportunities for car-share and ride-hailing” or “improvements to bike and pedestrian facilities.”

“There’s some tension between providing ample parking and providing alternatives to driving,” said Joe Edgell, the chair of the City’s Safe Roadways Committee. “One of the City Council’s directives when they set up the Safe Roadways Committee was to provide people alternatives to driving. If there are plenty of places to park, people will be encouraged to drive.”

Edgell pointed to the benefits of cutting back on car use. “It reduces pollution locally,” he said. “It’s far healthier to walk and bike than use your car, and it’s cheaper. It’s better for the environment; it’s better for the people. Communities are more livable if they have fewer cars. Study after study proves this.”

If parking is readily available, Edgell said, people would have less incentive to not drive.

“If you want to get people out of their cars, you need to make it easier for them to not use their cars or harder for them to use the cars - one of the two. The City wants to be responsive to its voters. People want ample parking, but that has secondary effects. It’s good that we’re looking at this issue comprehensively, but the difficult decision is the one the City Council has to make: Okay, now what do we do with this data?”

Senior Planner Erkin Ozberk hopes to present the recommendations that come as a result of the parking study to the City Council in January. “Now is the time for folks to look at the information that’s been posted,” Ozberk said, “and let us know how they feel about it.”

To learn more about the parking study and submit their comments, residents can go to takomaparkmd.gov/parking-study.

BUILDING COMMUNITY

Dorothy's Woods dedicated

A brief ceremony was held last month to celebrate the dedication of "Dorothy's Woods." The woods on the City-owned parcel of the Washington-McLaughlin property were named for longtime Takoma Park resident and local historian, Dorothy Thomsen Barnes, by City Council Resolution 2016-37. At the dedication, Mayor Kate Stewart presented a copy of the resolution to Ms. Barnes.

Longtime Takoma Park resident Dorothy Barnes and Mayor Kate Stewart at the dedication of Dorothy's Woods on Sunday, Oct. 23

The City purchased the land at a tax auction on Jan. 22, 2015. The Takoma Park community supported this action and made more than $53,000 in contributions towards its purchase. The property is home to a diversity of mature trees, birds and other wildlife as well as a natural spring. The preservation of this natural area is important to the community.

Residents requested that the parcel be named "Dorothy's Woods" in recognition of the relationship between Dorothy Barnes, lifelong resident, local historian, and avid lover of nature, and the property that was behind the house she has lived in nearly all her life.

As per the City Council's resolution, "naming the area as Dorothy's Woods serves as recognition of the contributions that Dorothy has made to Takoma Park by telling our story and preserving our history, and moreover, the name will continue the lifelong association between Dorothy and the woods." The resolution is available for review online at documents.takomaparkmd.gov/government/city-council/resolutions/2016/resolution-2016-37.pdf.

New Maryland laws

Various new Maryland laws went into effect on Oct. 1, 2016. The most well-known may be the Drunk Driving Reduction Act of 2016, also known as Noah's Law, named after slain Montgomery County Police Officer Noah Leotta. Leotta, 24, was hit Dec. 3, 2015, by a car on Rockville Pike; he died a week later. The driver charged with fatally striking Leotta – while he was working as part of a holiday task force fighting drunk driving – pleaded guilty to a manslaughter charge.

On May 19, Maryland Gov. Larry Hogan signed SB 945, also known as Noah's Law. The law requires the use of ignition interlocks for convicted drunk drivers; the devices prevent vehicles from starting when they detect a certain level of alcohol on the driver's breath and require the driver to retest at random points while they are driving.

During the past five years, impaired drivers have accounted for roughly one-third of all roadway deaths in Maryland. Under Noah's Law, drivers are required to participate in Maryland's Ignition Interlock Program for the following convictions:

- Driving under the influence
- Driving while impaired while transporting a minor under the age of 16
- Driving while intoxicated with an initial breathalyzer test refusal
- Homicide or life-threatening injury by motor vehicle while DUI or DWI

Below are some of the other new laws, but this list is not all inclusive.

Providing Alcohol to Underage Drinkers/Alex and Calvin's Law (HB409): Following the death of Alex Murk and Calvin Li in a 2015 drunken-driving accident after a party in Montgomery County, this law prohibits people from allowing underage individuals to consume alcohol if they should have known those individuals would drive under the influence.

Child Abuse and Neglect (SB310, HB245): Anyone involved in an investigation of child abuse or neglect must report suspicions of another individual knowingly failing to report child abuse to the appropriate board, agency, institution or facility.

Criminal Law-Stalking (SB278/HB155): This law expands the definition of stalker from inciting physical fears or threats to include causing emotional distress.

Death or Injury by Vehicle (SB0160, HB157): The law increases penalties for offenders who commit vehicular manslaughter who have been convicted of driving under the influence of drugs or alcohol previously. Offenders can now face up to 15 years in prison and $15,000 in fines.

For more information about new laws that have recently gone into effect in Maryland, visit mgaleg.maryland.gov.

Community Quality of Life Grants recipients announced

2016 Community Stories Festival: Q&A with Doc in Progress Executive Director Erica Ginsberg

Considering a third party candidate for any office in this month's election? Would you vote for a candidate with a reduced vocabulary, one name and more hair than what you'd find on your Uncle Louie's back?

Hank, the feline star of Wild about Hank; We're talking about a cat (What were you thinking?) that ran for the U.S. Senate seat against Tim Kaine and George Allen during the 2012 election in Virginia. Wild about Hank, directed by Emma Kouguell, debuts at the free Community Stories Festival at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 10, at the Takoma Park Community Center, and is one of many films presented by Docs in Progress.

Erica Ginsberg

We Are Takoma asked Docs in Progress Executive Director Erica Ginsberg to tell us more about Community Stories Festival and this year's films. Questions were submitted to her by email, and her answers have been lightly edited for space and grammar.

We Are Takoma: Describe the Community Stories Festival.

Ginsberg: The Community Stories Festival grew out of Docs in Progress wanting to give filmmakers a showcase for their documentaries about local topics. The festival celebrates how documentary film can be used both to reveal untold stories of our local community and also bring that community together.

The festival has been a program of Docs in Progress since 2010. That year, we held a one-night showcase screening in a small auditorium of films produced by adult and youth students in our documentary filmmaking classes. All the topics were local. While we expected their friends and family would show up, what we had not counted on was that we would have a standing room only crowd. What started as a one night festival for 75 people has grown into a multi-day event which, last year, attracted more than 500 people. Since 2013 one of the most popular nights of the festival has taken place at the Takoma Park Community Center, and we expect this year to be no different.

Enjoy an afternoon of children's songs and music with Mr. Gabe and the Circle Time All-Stars at the Community Center auditorium on Saturday, Nov. 12, at 4 p.m. Winners of two Parents' Choice Awards, the group performs a highly interactive mix of songs from many cultural traditions, family-friendly folk and pop songs, and Mr. Gabe originals. The program is free.

We Are Takoma: How has the festival been received in the community/surrounding area?

Ginsberg: We do year-round screening programs in partnership with We Are Takoma and get a respectable number of engaged Takoma Park residents for those events. However, Community Stories is on a whole other level. It's no surprise that Takoma Park residents are engaged with the community around them, and this is clear at Community Stories, where many locals attend and engage with the filmmakers, the people in the films and their neighbors.

We Are Takoma: What impact has it had?

Ginsberg: The biggest impact I see is for the filmmakers and those in the films. The films we show at Community Stories may not get distribution because it is really difficult for short films to make their way in the world of film distribution. They may also be pegged as "local interest" films, even when they have universal themes. Therefore, you are unlikely to see these films at the Sundance Film Festival or on Netflix. It is really rewarding to see the filmmakers get a chance to see their films on a big screen with a super-engaged audience.

We Are Takoma: What has been the most memorable moment from the Community Stories Festival for you?

Ginsberg: The Q&A's are always memorable because they are a chance for the audience to interact with the filmmakers and also some of the people who are in the films. It is exciting to see that "fourth wall" broken, where the people on the screen are there in the flesh. I also love when people learn new things about their own community—interesting people, untold history or a small business that perhaps they did not know about before.

We Are Takoma: What can you tell us about this year's event?

Ginsberg: While the early years of Community Stories featured only work by our students, since last year, we have opened up submissions to other filmmakers, as long as the topic is local (and, by local, we mean the whole DC Metro area). This year's festival takes place from November 9-12.

Wednesday, Nov. 9 is the opening night. This will take place at the AFI Silver Theatre in Downtown Silver Spring. The early show (6:30 p.m.) features short documentaries about local topics produced by students in our classes. The late show (8:45 p.m.) is the Maryland premiere of Indivisible, a film about young "Dreamers" fighting to reunite with their parents, who have been deported for being undocumented immigrants. Both of those screenings are ticketed events (tickets through Docs in Progress.)

Thursday, Nov. 10 takes place at the Takoma Park Community Center with a program of short documentaries. The films take us on a journey from the sorriest bus stop in America to the bike trails of DC. We will meet senior citizens energized by a love of the blues, local artists who find inspiration in unusual places, and a feline politico who decides to run for office. The filmmakers are both emerging filmmakers and seasoned pros. Thanks to a partnership with We Are Takoma, the screening in Takoma Park, will be completely free.

Friday, Nov. 11 features a partner program with the Wheaton Film Festival at Chuck Levin's Music Center in Wheaton. This will include film screenings and professional development panels for filmmakers or aspiring filmmakers.

Saturday, Nov. 12 is a day to try your own hand at documentary filmmaking. Docs in Progress will be offering two modestly-priced workshops at our space in Downtown Silver Spring – one on how to shoot documentary video using a mobile phone or tablet and the other on the art of the interview. William Rice helps Trevor Williams in the Multi Media Lab.

Multi Media Lab

By John Webster

The City of Takoma Park has a lot to be thankful for. With the help of City TV, IT and Recreation Department staff, the City of Takoma Park now has a fully functional Multi Media Lab. The lab opened its doors on Monday, Oct. 3 with eight computers that can be utilized by the Takoma Park community with all of the newest software. The Multi Media Lab is open Monday - Wednesday & Friday from 3 - 8 p.m. and Saturday from 12 - 5 p.m.

The staff for the Multi Media Lab are William Rice and Rob Radcliffe. Their goal is to ensure that the Takoma Park community residents are as knowledgeable about internet and communication technology as their peers in other communities.

"The new Multi Media Lab is amazing. It is exactly what we need in the current technological world," Radcliffe said.

"We have an incredible range of professional software, including the entire Adobe Creative Cloud Suite; Photoshop; Dreamweaver; Premier Pro; Audition; Illustrator; Photoshop; Lightroom; InDesign; Animate and After Effects, as well as Apple's powerful production tools such as FCPX, Motion, Compressor Garageband and others," Rice said.

This lab has the potential to be an oasis for everyone to use the newest software. "I would like the community to be able to learn and use these programs since these skills can provide them with a lot of opportunities in the future, and the cost of Adobe products can be a barrier to people being able to learn and use these programs", Radcliffe said.

"The Multi Media Lab creates a number of positive opportunities. If you want to be creative, we have the tools," Rice said. "Music, art, video, photography, web design, and animation, etc. Wherever your imagination wants to take you, we will help you get there. All ages are welcome. Bring your curiosity and imagination, come learn and have fun."

Both Rice and Radcliffe believe that the goal for the Multi Media Lab is to help people in the community see that they are capable of learning and creating the same content that they see on YouTube or on posters they see and providing them a space where they can learn these skills at their own pace. They also believe that the Multi Media Lab provides opportunities for everyone. There are great computer resources available for the Takoma Park community in this state-of-the-art facility, including the most powerful iMac computers that are fully loaded with a wide range of professional creative software. Come on out and enjoy the fun of the Takoma Park Multi Media Lab.

NEW! Multi Media Lab Open Hours

Located on the second floor of the Community Center, participants will have access to the latest Mac computers, word processing and editing software including but not limited to Final Cut Pro and a variety of other programs. Utilizing this equipment will allow you to produce professional work of the highest quality at your own pace. No instruction provided, work independently. The Multi Media Lab will be closed on Thursdays and Sundays. Instructors: William Rice and Rob Radcliffe.

Residents register first

By Apryl Motley

Beginning with registration for winter recreation department classes on Thursday, Dec. 15, Takoma Park residents won't have to worry as much about spaces filling up in some of the more popular programs, such as the ones for seniors. They will register a full week earlier than non-residents, who will be eligible to register for classes on Thursday, Dec. 22.

"We started looking at implementing this policy about a year ago based on the popularity of our programs and classes, which increasingly are full and have waiting lists," said Takoma Park Recreation Director Gregory Clark.

"There needed to be a mechanism in place so that residents would have the first opportunity to participate since we are supported by City tax dollars."

Before coming to Takoma Park 10 years ago, Clark worked in Prince Georges County where early or preferred registration for residents was already in place. "This practice is used in other jurisdictions in our area and around the country," he said.

Residents can take advantage of preferred registration both online and in person. Residency is based on having an address within the City limits. To confirm whether you are a City resident, visit takomaparkmd.gov/news.

Pathways to literacy

By Karen MacPherson

Creating pathways to literacy – for various ages and stages – infuses all Library programs. Our efforts start with the youngest children – and their families and caregivers – because research shows that the earlier children are introduced to literacy concepts, the better their chances are for school success. As recent research has shown, by the time children from low-income families reach the age of four, they will have heard 30 million fewer words than their more advantaged peers. Clearly, these children will start school at a huge disadvantage unless there is some intervention.

That's where our Library programs for young children and their parents and caregivers can play a key role in the community. All of our early literacy programs are free, of course, and they are built on research disseminated by the American Library Association showing best practices for getting children ready to read.

A key part of these programs is modeling these best practices for parents and caregivers, so they can bring those practices back into the home. Our Library programs range from the hugely popular Circle Times on Tuesdays and Spanish Circle Times on Thursdays (both now offered twice weekly) to our Wednesday morning early literacy programs offering age-targeted activities for babies, toddlers and preschoolers. We also offer a monthly Petites Chansons (French Circle Time) and are working to create a second monthly French program for preschoolers; our current program is popular with both native French-speakers, many from African Francophone countries, as well as parents who are hoping to start their children on French as a second language.

One Monday evening each month, we provide a fun family literacy activity in our Caldecott Club, where we read and discuss some of the best new picture books, using the criteria of the prestigious Caldecott Medal. Besides giving families a chance to read some new books together, the Caldecott Club helps develop visual literacy, an increasingly important kind of literacy in our screen-filled world.

Our monthly Comics Jam offers another opportunity to develop visual literacy for both kids and adults. Comics Jam allows us to showcase our greatly-in-demand collection of kids' and teen graphic novels, which are popular with both reluctant and eager readers. In fact, we see our graphic novel collection as one way to convince kids, especially reluctant readers, to trade their digital screens for illustrated books that actually require a different kind of brainpower to read the information in both pictures and words to make sense of a story.

Our monthly LEGO Club highlights STEAM (Science, Technology, Engineering, Art and Math) skills in a fun way. Kids can build around a particular theme or just enjoy the pleasure of using their math, science or math skills to create with LEGO, inspired by the numerous LEGO idea books that are part of the library's collection.

In addition, we have strong literacy-focused partnerships with the neighboring schools. For example, for nearly a decade, the 4th grade classes at Piney Branch Elementary School have visited the Library each week for a program focused on their language arts curriculum (i.e. historical fiction, mythology, etc.).

We also regularly host programs for other grades at both Piney Branch and Takoma Park Elementary School and have offered programs for English as a Second Language students at Takoma Park Middle School. We're currently part of a Takoma Foundation grant (in its second year) as a partner with Takoma Park Elementary School in its Books & Breakfast program. This program is focused on literacy activities – including an introduc-

Praise for a new French graphic novels

By Pat Hanrahan

French language readers take note. The Takoma Park Maryland Library has expanded its French collection with the purchase of two volumes of graphic memoir by Riad Sattouf, Larabe du future, an autobiography of a childhood in the Middle East.

The product of a French mother and Syrian father, young Sattouf spent his early childhood in Libya and Syria. His story of these years (1978 – 1985) is gripping. It helped me understand a bit better what is happening now in Syria.

Sattouf père believed the Arab world of the 70's was poised for outstanding achievements. With his wife and child, he moved to his birth village to participate in the glorious future which as we know never happened. The author writes about Syria from a child's point of view and without censure. His parents, his teacher and his peers dominate his days. The illustrations enhance the childish perception. For instance the teacher is always enormous, and when she's angry, her mouth can take over an entire graphic square in the band of illustrations. Characters who are outraged express themselves in deep red text balloons.

A best seller in France, Sattouf's book has been translated into English with positive reviews. The TPML has the English editions of the first two books and will purchase the subsequent volumes as they are translated into English. So far three volumes — of an expected five volumes — have been published in French, and all three are available at the Library, so try the books in French. Reading French graphic books is fun. Even if you aren't bilingual (which I am most definitely not), the illustrations help comprehension when words are baffling, and graphic book text is often minimal anyway.

So go for it! Enjoy a feeling of accomplishment from reading a book en français, particularly one that is as hard to put down as Sattouf's bande-dessinée.

Pat Hanrahan is a Takoma Park resident and serves on the Board of the Friends of the Takoma Park Maryland Library.

Fortnightly Book Discussion in November

By Tim Rahn

The Secret Chord, a retelling of the story of the Biblical David by the award-winning author Geraldine Brooks, will be discussed on Wednesday, November 16 at 7:30 p.m. in the Hydrangea Room of the Community Center.

Narrated by the court prophet-advisor Natan (Nathan), The Secret Chord, tells the often bloody story of David's reign as king of Israel. Brooks uses David's complexity to explore loyalty and treachery that comes with power. She also explores David's relationships with the members of his extended family including his wives.

Published in 2015, The Secret Chord was the recipient of con-

Accessing, not hacking: Emergency preparedness in the digital age, part I

It is common these days to use the internet to pay bills via automatic bill pay or to have the utility or mortgage company automatically deduct the monthly payments. We're on Facebook, Google, Twitter, LinkedIn, and other sites. We access our bank statements online. We store other information, such as pictures or private notes in the cloud.

What happens if you or a loved one is incapacitated or passes away...do the bills automatically stop? No! Can family members access bank accounts? Not until probate or power of attorney is established. How would family members even know what to access or at which banks? What happens to the person's Facebook account or Google mail or Apple accounts? What happens to the domain name of the person's website?

True story #1: Arthur's father passed away. The family had no idea what was getting paid via auto pay, what bills were involved, or how to find and access bank accounts.

True story # 2: Martina was an only child whose parents had died years ago. Then, Martina was killed in an accident. Yet, her Facebook account lives on. Some people still comment, wishing her a joyous afterlife, peace, etc.

In 2016 and beyond, we need to be prepared for these kinds of scenarios by providing access to trust others, or our digital lives could continue beyond our lifespans with consequences that could become emergencies.

To avoid the situation becoming an emergency, here are some points to consider:

- What do you know about dealing with a Facebook account for someone who is incapacitated or has died? What about your account? What are the limits? Facebook calls these memorialized accounts, which allows for deletion or saving some aspects of the account, so friends can still see the profile.
- Google offers a service called inactive account manager, which allows the account holder to have Google notify someone if they've been inactive for X amount of time. Since Google has varied services, such as Picasa, Google Plus and more, this action affects all accounts per the direction of the account holder.
- <https://support.google.com/accounts/answer/3036546?hl=en>
- If you have two-factor authentication, how could a trusted person access your accounts? Two-factor authentication requires a password and username and information known only to the user.
- Have you safely stored a list of your varied accounts, and can someone you trust access this? Keep in mind that passwords stored with an account may change due to requirements or personal choice, so you'll need to update those changes.

City Council provides direction on conversion to LED street lighting

After extensive investigation into options and costs and a presentation to the City Council on Sept. 21, City staff have been directed to pursue converting the PEPCO streetlights on wooden poles in the city to LED lights through the PEPCO conversion program. The conversion will be phased in on a neighborhood by neighborhood basis and will allow for adjustments to the program if needed.

At its Oct. 19 meeting, the City Council passed a resolution supporting the conversion of streetlights on wooden poles in Takoma Park to LED lights through the PEPCO conversion program and directed staff to work to ensure that lighting specifications and placement minimize costs, energy use, and light pollution, while enhancing safety and attractiveness.

In terms of environmental impact, conversion of existing streetlight fixtures to ones that are more energy efficient (LED technology) would reduce the City's streetlight electricity use from 765,599 kwh to 382,800 kwh annually. LED fixtures also will be night sky compliant, within the 3,000 Kelvin level, to minimize light pollution. From a fiscal standpoint, the City could save between $746,000 and $904,000 in current dollars over a 20-year period by converting streetlights to LED fixtures through PEPCO.

LED conversion has already begun with the Flower Avenue Green Street project, and five percent of the City's streetlights have already been converted. PEPCO will continue to own and maintain the lights, and the City will continue to pay for monthly maintenance charges per the rates set by the Public Service Commission. Further, the City will continue to procure its electricity through the Montgomery County purchasing group which enables the City to be part of a large buying group and thereby reduces the rate per kilowatt, and City staff will work with PEPCO staff to ensure that the replacement lighting is appropriate for City streets.

New Sligo trail guide is now online

Long-time Friends of Sligo Creek board member and past-president Bruce Sidwell created a section-by-section trail guide to Sligo Creek Park based on his long experience in promoting the ecological health of the watershed. The guide helps users better appreciate the natural and historic features of the park and adjacent areas. The guide follows Sligo Creek from its headwaters at Channing Drive to its confluence with the Northwest Branch after flowing better than eight miles. One theme of the new trail guide is that to fully appreciate the park, one needs to go slowly, look closely, carry a couple of plant and animal field guides and wear sensible footwear. Access the guide at www.fosc.org by going to the "trail guide" page under the "About Sligo" tab on the home page.

TPPD offers house checks

Takoma Park author to debut his first nonfiction work

Join us on Tuesday, Dec. 6 at 7:30 p.m. in the library for a discussion of Yudhijit's Bhattacharjee's book The Spy Who Couldn't Spell – A Dyslexic Traitor, an Unbreakable Code, and the FBI's Hunt for America's Stolen Secrets.

Bhattacharjee's book has been widely praised by reviewers. Publisher's Weekly noted that "readers...will thoroughly enjoy this fast-moving account of a failed spy who, despite his incompetence, easily filched thousands of secrets." And from Kirkus Reviews: "The author offers a compellingly seedy portrait of Regan, motivated to contemplate treason due to debt, career stagnation, and marital malaise...a well-written...tale of thwarted amateur treason underscoring the disturbing vulnerability of today's intelligence systems."

This program is funded by the Friends of the Takoma Park Maryland Library. Copies of the book will be available for purchase and signing at the program.

siderable praise by reviewers. Alice Hoffman, writing in the Washington Post, commented that "The Secret Chord reads like a prose poem, with battle after battle recounted in detail, but it's a page turner of a poem. We want to know how David manages to stave off his rivals and enemies, just as we want to know what love means to him and who, if anyone, will cause him to be faithful."

Brooks began her writing career as journalist before turning to non-fiction and then novels such as The People of the Book, Caleb's Crossing, and Year of Wonder. In 2006 Brooks received the Pulitzer Prize for fiction for the novel, March.

Sponsored by the Friends Book Group, the discussion is open to all. Copies of The Secret Chord are available on loan from the library.

LITERACY

tion to the library and its resources – for ESL students and their families.

The library also hosts regular programs for local preschools, providing literacy-based story times and related activities. These programs are aimed both at preschoolers and their teachers, as we model best practices for reading aloud to young children and other ways to make books and reading come alive.

For older students, we offer a book reviewing student service learning opportunity. As part of this opportunity, students learn to write book reviews, which eventually are published on the library's website

One of the best – and most exciting – ways of promoting literacy is meeting a published author or illustrator. With our partnership with Politics & Prose Bookstore, our patrons can meet some of the most talented and dynamic authors and illustrators working today in creating books for kids and teens. If you've never been to one of our author programs, give it a try. We have found that these programs are both fun and inspirational for readers, young and old.

Lecture: Inventing Food Traditions for D.C.

Thursday, Dec. 1, 7:30 – 9 p.m.

TP Community Center

As food activists push Washington, D.C., to be a model of local, seasonal, sustainable food production and consumption, it is worth asking why the nation's capital has taken so long to establish a distinctive food identity. Indeed, it does have great food, but not terroir, a locale-based sense of unique authenticity which is more a matter of constructed, subjective reputation than quantifiable, objective standards. In this talk University of Maryland professor emeritus Warren Belasco looks at the historical, political, ideological, and environmental obstacles to the development of a local food identity in the nation's capital.

UPCOMING EVENTS

Staging Hope

Saturday, Dec. 3, 7:30 – 9 p.m.

TP Community Center

Staging Hope is a theatre troupe made up entirely of homeless individuals. They create performances of original monologues, poetry, improvisations and songs as a means to spark conversations between housed and unhoused communities. While many of the pieces directly focus on homelessness – difficulties, political issues, humanization, etc. – others deal with universal human experiences such as loss, family, and romantic love.
